TO MY FATHER

PREFATORY NOTE

In the present volume an important treatise on the canons of dramatic composition in early India is published for the first time in an English translation, with the text, explanatory notes, and an introductory account of the author and his work. As a contribution to our knowledge of Hindu dramaturgy, I am glad to accord the book a place in the Indo-Iranian Series, particularly as it comes from one who has long been associated with me as a co-worker in the Oriental field.

A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON.

PREFACE

The publication of the present volume, originally planned for 1909, has been delayed until now by various contingencies both unforeseen and unavoidable. While in some respects unfortunate, this delay has been of advantage in giving me opportunities for further investigation and enabling me to add considerably to my collection of comparative material.

For information regarding the plan and scope of the book I would refer the reader to pages xli-xlv of the Introduction. I take this opportunity, however, to emphasize the fact that the transliterated text of Dhananjaya's treatise has been included solely for the convenience of those using the book; with the exception of a few minor corrections and emendations it is the same as that originally published by Hall in 1865. It should be noted, furthermore, that I have not undertaken to present the comments of Dhanika except in a few special cases, the paragraphs headed 'Com.' being devoted chiefly to recording the source of his numerous illustrative quotations. The limitations I have imposed on myself in the notes will be evident to the reader on inspection.

In deference to the wishes of the publishers I have refrained from using in the present volume the simpler English spellings recommended by the Simplified Spelling Board. I should have preferred to adopt them here, as I have done in my personal correspondence, because I believe that the use of the simpler forms in the publication of books and papers is one of the most effective means of furthering a change at once so necessary and so reasonable.

I am indebted to the librarians of the India Office and of the Deutsche Morgenländische Gesellschaft for their kindness in sending to Professor Jackson, for my use, a number of volumes that were not accessible in this country. It is a pleasure to acknowledge also the uniform courtesy of the publishers, whose patience must have been sorely taxed by the long course of publication, and of the printers, who have not only performed their part of the task in a highly creditable manner, but have shown the greatest forbearance with the unavoidable delays incident to the production of the book.

My special thanks are due to Professor E. Washburn Hopkins for the use of his copy of the Satsaiya of Bihārī and for comments on certain difficult passages; to Professor Charles R. Lanman for placing at my disposal a rare version of the Mahānātaka and giving me suggestions regarding certain parts of my translation; and to Dr. Franklin Edgerton for material from an unpublished MS. of the Vikramacarita. I am sincerely grateful as well to Dr. Charles J. Ogden, who read the entire book in proof and gave me numerous welcome corrections and suggestions, and to Dr. Louis H. Gray, who carefully examined with me many difficult passages and whose broad scholarship has been helpful at all stages of the work. I wish to express also my appreciation of the help of two other friends, Miss Marie L. Weiss and Miss Jane Porter Williams, who have in various ways generously contributed to the successful completion of my task.

And I wish to record here, above all, some expression, however inadequate, of the debt of gratitude I owe to my friend and teacher, Professor A. V. Williams Jackson. His kindly interest in my work has never flagged since the day, now twelve years past, when I first took up the study of Sanskrit under his guidance, and, even amid the pressure of multifarious duties, he has always placed his time and energy ungrudgingly at my disposal. In the preparation of this book I have had throughout the benefit of his encouragement and his stimulating criticism, and it bears some evidence of his comments and suggestions on almost every page. My years of association with him at Columbia as pupil and as co-worker will always remain a precious memory.

GEORGE C. O. HAAS.

INTRODUCTION

I. CONCERNING THE DAŚARŪPA OF DHANAṆJAYA

The author and his patron. The Daśarūpa,¹ or Treatise on the Ten Forms of Drama, one of the most important works on Hindu dramaturgy, was composed by Dhanan̄jaya, son of Viṣṇu, in Mālava in the last quarter of the tenth century A.D., during the reign of Vākpatirāja II, or Muñja.² The monarch's name is given by Dhanan̄jaya in his concluding stanza (DR. 4. 91), where he states that his 'intelligence was derived from discourse with the sovereign lord Muñja.' This ruler, who had a great variety of names or epithets (Muñja, Vākpati, Utpalarāja, Amoghavarṣa, Pṛthivīvallabha, Śrīvallabha),³ was the seventh

² See Bühler (and Zachariae), 'Ueber das Navasāhasāṅkacharita des Padmagupta oder Parimala,' in Sb. der phil.-hist. Classe der kais. Akad. der Wiss. zu Wien, 116 (1888), p. 620-625 (= English translation, Ind. Ant. 36. 168-170). The last (15th) section of the first prakāśa of Merutuṅga's Prabandhacintāmaṇi (completed April, 1306) is devoted to an account of Muñja; see the translation by Tawney, Calcutta, 1901 (Bibliotheca Indica), p. 30-36. Muñja is mentioned by Sambhu in his Rājendrakarṇapūra, v. 17 (Aufrecht, Catalogus Catalogorum, 1. 460 b). For inscriptions recording land-grants by Muñja-Vākpati see Archaeol. Survey of Western India, vol. 3 (Burgess), London, 1878, p. 100 (given also at Ind. Ant. 6. 48-53); Ind. Ant. 14. 159-161.

³ Cf. Bühler, op. cit. p. 620-621; Ep. Ind. 1. 226. See also p. xxiii, below. For an inscription giving the name Utpalarāja see Ep. Ind. 5, p. vi.

rāja of the Paramāra dynasty of Mālava.¹ He came to the throne in 974 A.D., succeeding his father Siyaka, and held sway until about 995,² when he was defeated, taken captive, and executed by the neighboring Cālukya king Tailapa II (or Taila),³ whom he had, according to the author Merutuṅga, conquered in six previous campaigns.⁴

Muñja was not only an intrepid warrior, but a poet⁵ and patron of letters as well. Padmagupta, the author of the Navasāhasāṅkacarita, twice calls the king a 'friend of poets'⁶ and states that it was because of royal favor that he, too, was able to 'wander along the path trod by the master-poets.'⁷ The lexicographer Halāyudha also, in commenting on the metrical treatise of Piṅgala, includes stanzas in praise of Muñja's liberality.⁸ Furthermore

Dhanika, poet and commentator, held an official position at the court¹; Dhanamjaya claims, as we have seen, to have profited by conversations with his august ruler; and the work of other authors, to be mentioned below, bears added witness to the literary activity during his reign. Some indication that Muñja himself was regarded as a poet² is to be found in the fact that Merutuṅga depicts the captive king as versifying his plaints.³ That he actually was a writer of verse, however, is clearly established by quotations of some of his lines by later writers and in anthologies. One of his stanzas, for example, is twice quoted by Dhanika in his commentary on the Daśarūpa, the author being given in the one case as 'Śrī-Vākpatirājadeva' and in the other as 'Śrī-Muñja.'⁴ Another stanza is reproduced by the later Paramāra king Arjunavarman (who ruled early in the thirteenth century) in his Rasikasamjivani, a commentary on the Amaruśataka, with the statement that it was composed by 'our ancestor Muñja, whose other name was Vākpatirāja.'⁵ The poet Kṣemendra (fl. 1037-1066 A.D.) quotes three different stanzas by 'Śrīmad-Utpalarāja,' in as many of his works.⁶ Two of these, found respectively in the Suvṛttatilaka and the Kavikanṭhābharana, are not otherwise known; the third, a well-known stanza beginning ahau vā hāre vā, recurs in one of the Centuries attributed to Bhartṛhari, where it is probably to be regarded as an interpolation.¹ Vallabhadeva included this same stanza and one other in his anthology,² and two further specimens of the royal author's verses are found in the Śārngadharapaddhati (c. 1363 A.D.).³

Contemporaries of Dhanamjaya. Concerning Dhanamjaya⁴ himself nothing is known save his authorship of the Daśarūpa and his relations with King Muñja, aside from the fact that a stanza attributed to him is included in Śrīdharadāsa's anthology, the Saduktikarṇāmṛta.⁵ Some idea of the literary atmosphere in which he lived, however, can be obtained from a consideration of the other writers that flourished in Mālava at this time. Foremost to command our attention is Dhanika, son of Viṣṇu, who not only wrote poetry in Sanskrit and in Prākṛit, but also prepared the current commentary on the Daśarūpa. He and his commentary will be specially referred to below, in the second part of this Introduction. Next may be mentioned the lexicographer and poet Dhanapāla, son of Sarvadeva, who lived at Dhārā,⁶ the Mālava capital, under Vākpati and his predecessor Siyaka.⁷ He was the author of the Pāyīlacchī, a Prākṛit vocabulary, completed in 972-973 A.D.,¹ and, after his conversion to Jainism, of the Ṛṣabhapañcāsikā, fifty verses in Prākṛit in honor of Ṛṣabha, the first prophet of the Jains. A work named Tilakamañjarī is also ascribed to him.² Dhanapāla's younger brother, Śobhanamuni, who was an ardent Jain and is said to have converted his brother to his religious belief after prolonged efforts, was also one of the literary men of this time, having composed the Śobhanastutayas, also called Caturviṃśatikā, a work on which Dhanapāla later prepared a commentary.³ Another contemporary writer, Bhaṭṭa Halāyudha, who probably spent the latter part of his life in Mālava, is known to have been the author of three technical works.⁴ Presumably the oldest of these is a lexicographical compendium, the Abhidhānaratnamālā⁵; the Kavirahasya was written about the year 950 at Mānyakheṭa at the court of King Kṛṣṇarāja III⁶; and the Mṛtasaṃjīvanī, a commentary on the Piṅgalachandaśūtra, was prepared considerably later at Dhārā at the court of King Muñja, whose liberality is appreciatively referred to in some of the stanzas.⁷ The poet Padmagupta (also called Parimala), son of Mṛgāṅkagupta, found favor, as was mentioned above, with Vākpatirāja and later with his successor Sindhurāja, at whose direction he wrote the Navasāhasāṅkacarita, a mahākāvya in glorification of the sovereign.¹ Dhanika quotes one of his stanzas in his commentary on the Daśarūpa.² To this same period belongs also the Jain author Amitagati, who finished his Subhāṣitasamḍoha, or Subhāṣitaratnasamḍoha, in 993 A.D., in the reign of Muñja.³ Another work of his, entitled Dharma-parīkṣā, was written in the year 1014.⁴

Scope and importance of the Daśarūpa. In the Daśarūpa Dhanamjaya presents, in the form of a brief manual, the rules of the references to Muñja-Vākpati (for a list of which see Weber, Indische Studien, 8. 193-4) is as follows (4. 20):—

sa jayati Vākpatirājaḥ sakalārthimanorathaikakalpataruḥ pratyardhībhitapārthivalakṣmīhaṭṭhaharaṇādurlalitaḥ.

Peterson, Subhāṣitāvali, Bombay, 1886, p. 115, states that this verse is quoted in the Daśarūpāvaloka, but I do not find it in the printed text.

of dramatic composition originally laid down in the great compendium of Hindu dramatic science, the Bhāratiyanāṭyaśāstra. That monumental work, although regarded as authoritative and even invested by tradition with the character of semidivine revelation, was altogether too cumbersome for ordinary use and had the additional disadvantages of diffuse style and a somewhat unsystematic arrangement. From the point of view of the dramatist, particularly, it was unsatisfactory, since the purely dramaturgic portions were submerged, so to speak, in a mass of histrionic and general prescriptions. The author of the Daśarūpa accordingly aims, as he himself says, to restate the principles of dramaturgy in more concise and systematic form.¹ He not only professes great reverence for the rules of Bharata,² but actually adheres for the most part to the terminology and definitions attributed to the venerated sage. Dhanamjaya has a somewhat different classification of heroines (DR. 2. 24), and in his treatment of the Erotic Sentiment (DR. 4. 58, etc.) he introduces a new distinction (which, it may be noted in passing, apparently found no favor, for it is ignored by all the later authorities). At 3. 48, after quoting (though without indication of source) part of the definition of the nāṭikā given in Bh., he ventures to modify it in the direction of greater latitude. The other variations between the two works are not of any special significance and are few in number.³

The excellence of Dhanamjaya's presentation and its convenient form gave the Daśarūpa a prominence that it has retained to the present day. As a compact exposition of the dicta of the Bhāratiyanāṭyaśāstra, it largely superseded that work, manuscripts of which are consequently extremely rare, and it so completely supplanted such dramaturgic treatises as existed previous

Its importance in the eyes of Indian students of the drama is further attested by the numerous citations of its rules and allusions to them in later rhetorical and dramaturgic treatises and in the native commentaries on Hindu plays. In the Pratāparudriya, for example, we find ten quotations from the Daśarūpa,¹ the source being indicated in all but one of the cases; three other passages, also ascribed to the Daśarūpa, are not to be found in our text.² The Sāhityadarpaṇa, furthermore, not only refers to the *Daśarūpa*³ and criticizes some of its statements,⁴ but bases its treatment of dramaturgy to a great extent on Dhanaṃjaya's work and repeats verbatim or with minor variations a large number of its sections. A similar dependence on the Daśarūpa and recognition of its value is found also in other dramaturgic treatises.

Style and method of treatment. In style the Daśarūpa differs very largely from the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra (upon which, as stated above, it is professedly based). The latter is very diffuse, abounds in transitional and introductory formulas,⁵ and often uses stock phrases to fill incomplete lines.⁶ The Daśarūpa, on the other hand, is extremely condensed and avoids all formulaic 'padding' except where it is absolutely required by the meter.⁷ In many cases, however, brevity is attained at the expense of clearness, and not a few definitions would be absolutely obscure except for the help to be derived from the commentary and the parallel passages that are to be found in other dramaturgic and rhetorical treatises. This is especially the case where only a single word is used to explain the meaning of a technical term, as often happens in Book 1, in the treatment of dramatic structure.¹

In his definitions of technical terms, Dhanamjaya occasionally resorts to etymological explanations, on the supposition that the root of a word or its component parts will give a satisfactory idea of its meaning and application.² As a typical example, and one which shows the method at its best, may be cited the treatment of the word ādhikārika in 1. 19. Analytic in character is the definition of the term vyabhicārin (4. 8)—

viśeṣād ābhimukhyena caranto vy-abhi-cāriṇaḥ —

in which the author attempts to indicate the force of each of the components by a separate explanatory word. Other examples of etymologic interpretation are found at 1. 9, 20, 81, 126; 2. 44.

The Hindu fondness for minute and often futile classification and subdivision is in evidence throughout the work, but is best exemplified in the treatment of the Erotic Sentiment (4. 56-78) and also of the types of heroine (2. 24-35), the classification of which is shown by a diagram on page 149. Dhanamjaya fortunately refrains from foolish computation (so often found in later treatises³) as to the theoretically possible number of types of hero and heroine, but his commentator makes up for the deficiency in the former case.⁴

Meters and metrical considerations. The Daśarūpa is composed for the most part in the ordinary śloka meter regularly found in treatises of this kind. Eighteen stanzas, however, including the last section in each book, are written in other meters. A list of these is here given in the order of their occurrence.

³ See my notes on DR. 2. 45.

⁴ Cf. DR. 2. 11, com.

1. 3	āryā	4. 44	āryā
4	sragdharā	57	indravajrā (6 lines)
6	indravajrā	79	vasantatilaka
129	vasantatilaka	80	śārdūlavikrīḍita
2. 105	upajāti	81	śārdūlavikrīḍita
3. 65	vasantatilaka	83	āryā (2 stanzas)
4. 9	sragdharā	90	vasantatilaka
15	āryā	91	indravajrā
35	sragdharā

One of these stanzas (4. 9), a veritable metrical tour de force, embodies in its four lines, without extraneous matter of any kind, the names of the thirty-three Transitory States. The second āryā stanza at 4. 83 is defective in all previous editions, lacking one syllabic instant in the second half of the first line. As indicated in the notes on that section, I have remedied this by a very simple emendation of the text.

As might well be expected, Dhanamjaya has to resort to a number of expedients to round out his lines or to obtain the needful succession of light and heavy syllables. Perhaps the most natural of these, the use of 'verse-fillers,' is much less frequent in the Daśarūpa than in other works of this kind, because of the compact arrangement of the material. Instances, however, occur here and there; cf. 1. 27 (ākhyā); 2. 49 b (tathā); etc. Transitional phrases (such as atha lakṣaṇam), which occur in the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra with almost unfailing regularity, are similarly but little employed, the two chief cases being at 1. 38 and 1. 67. Great advantage in versification is gained also by the alternation of such verbs and verbal forms as syāt, bhavet, iṣyate, smṛta, mata, and parikīrtita. Another device, which is especially helpful in the metrical adjustment of enumerations and lists of technical terms, is the arbitrary grouping of words into copulative compounds. The most conspicuous example of this is undoubtedly the sragdharā stanza at 4. 9; others may be found at 1. 38 c, 67, 82, 97; 2. 15, 83 b; 3. 13; 4. 81 d.

To metrical exigencies also must be attributed the use of a large number of dramatic terms in varying forms, as well as the occasional substitution of the synonymous word for the term regularly employed. These variations may be conveniently grouped under six heads. The list of examples appended is practically exhaustive (but see also my notes on 4. 84, 86, 87).

It is probably to these same considerations of meter that we must ascribe the adjectival use, in more than twenty cases, of numeral derivatives in -dhā, in place of the regular adjective derivatives in -vidha (of which only four examples occur: dvividha, 1. 15; caturvidha, 4. 52 b; ṣaḍvidha, 3. 58; daśavidha, 3. 54 d). Clearly adjectival in construction and signification, though not in form, are the following words, most of which are used as predicates:

dveddhā: 2. 31, 79 d.

2. CONCERNING DHANIKA'S COMMENTARY ON THE DAŚARŪPA

Authorship and date. In most of the manuscripts the Daśarūpa is accompanied by a Sanskrit commentary, in prose, entitled Daśarūpāvaloka,¹ or 'Examination of the Daśarūpa.' Its author, Dhanika, son of Viṣṇu,² is described, in one of the manuscripts, as an officer (mahāsādhyapāla) of King Utpalarāja,³

¹ Hall (p. 4, notes) records that one of his manuscripts has, in one place, the variant form Daśarūpāloka.

² There are known also commentaries on this work by Nṛsiṃha Bhaṭṭa (Aufrecht, Catalogus Catalogorum, 1. 247 b, 248 a), by Pāṇi, or Devapāṇi (Aufrecht, 2. 53), by Kṣaṇīdhara Miśra (Hall, p. 4, notes), by Kuravirāma (Aufrecht, 2. 53). So far as I am aware, none of these have been made accessible in printed form.

who is, as we have seen, none other than Muñja, the patron of Dhanamjaya.¹ This statement, together with the fact that the work contains (at 2. 65) a quotation from Padmagupta's Nava-sāhasāṅkacarita (a poem published after 995 A.D., in the reign of Sindhurāja), enables us to assign Dhanika's commentary approximately to the end of the tenth century.² It is consequently not at all impossible (though I do not regard it as probable) that our commentator is the same person as the Dhanika Paṇḍita to whose son Vasantācārya a tract of land was granted in 974 A.D. by King Vākpati (= Muñja).³ This conclusion as to the age of the Daśarūpāvaloka would seem to be invalidated by the occurrence, at the end of the first book (1. 129, com.), of a quotation from Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī, a work composed about 1037 A.D., but the four lines in question occur in only one of the manuscripts and are generally admitted, for this and other reasons, to be a later interpolation.⁴

It has been suggested, because of the similarity of the names and the identity of the patronymic, that the author of the Daśarūpa and its commentator were one and the same person.⁵ This view is supported by the fact that the Daśarūpa is usually referred to in later treatises as the work of Dhanika⁶ and that the commentary seems to form an essential part of the treatise. On the other hand, there are in the commentary a number of indications of a difference in authorship,¹ and it is difficult to resist the conclusion that Dhanika, its author, was some contemporary of Dhanamjaya, very probably his brother, who collaborated in the production of the work.²

Of other works by Dhanika only a few fragments have survived to the present day. From seven couplets quoted in his comment on DR. 4. 46 it appears that he composed a treatise on poetics, entitled Kāvyanirṇaya, of which nothing further is known. His Avaloka also reveals him as a writer of poetry, since he cites twenty-four of his own stanzas, twenty in Sanskrit and four in Prākṛit, as illustrations of Dhanamjaya's definitions.³ Two of these stanzas are included, under his name, in the Śārngadharapaddhati, and still another is found in that anthology without indication of authorship.⁴ Very probably Dhanika was a poet of some repute and belonged to the literary circle at King Muñja's court,⁵ for we find his name mentioned with those of

² Cf. Hall, p. 2-4. That they were brothers is accepted, for example, by Keith, A Catalogue of the Sanskrit and Prākṛit MSS. in the Indian Institute Library, Oxford, Oxford, 1903, p. 4.

other poets (Kālidāsa, Amara, Sundara, and Śaṅkha) in an anonymous stanza recorded by Cowell.¹

Character and value. Although professedly an aid to the understanding of the text, the commentary leaves much to be desired and is not nearly so helpful as the average work of its kind. At times it explains what is so clear as to require no comment (this is, however, frequently the case in Hindu glosses); often, on the other hand, obscure words and phrases receive no elucidation whatever, and whole sections are occasionally dismissed with but the single word spṛṣtam, '[it is] clear.' Even where Dhanamjaya's definitions of technical terms are illustrated by means of examples from Sanskrit literature, the absence of further explanation sometimes leaves the exact meaning in doubt. The real merit of Dhanika's Avaloka lies in the occasional lengthy discussions of disputed and obscure points and in his collection of illustrative quotations, many of which are of value in obtaining a clear conception of the principles of Hindu dramaturgy.

Dhanika's explanatory and illustrative quotations. In his explanations of Dhanamjaya's rules, Dhanika not only refers to scenes and situations of the principal Hindu dramas,² but also quotes such passages as will serve to illustrate the matters under discussion. His quotations are, however, by no means confined to dramatic works, but are drawn to a considerable extent from other fields of literature as well, particularly from the sententious poetry and the so-called kāvya productions. Occasionally also he corroborates his statements by an excerpt from the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra or some other technical work.

The range of these citations and references, so far as they have been identified, can best be seen from the following tabulation, in which works merely mentioned (but not quoted) are enclosed in parentheses. In the case of works cited only a few times, all the occurrences are recorded after the names or in the footnotes.

Rudra — one stanza at DR. 4. 67.

Dhanika — twenty-four stanzas (see page xxxiv, note 3).

(Bhaṭṭa Bāṇa's Mahāśvetāvarṇanāvasara, mentioned at DR. 2. 54).

5. Technical works

Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra⁷ — DR. 2. 11; 3. 46, 59; 4. 2, 4, 5, 6, 50, 52, 89.

Kāmasūtra of Vātsyāyana — DR. 3. 45; (4. 64).

A treatise by Bhartṛhari (apparently not the Vākyapadīya) — DR. 4. 2.

Kāvyaḷaṃkāra of Rudraṭa⁸ — DR. 4. 44.

Kāvyaniṛṇaya, by Dhanika himself — DR. 4. 46.

The quotations frequently deviate from the published texts of the works from which they are drawn. Such variations may be due either to Dhanika's quoting from memory, to the existence of other recensions than those known to us, or to corruption in transmission. They are in most cases of no special importance.

¹ A play by Māyurāja. It is quoted at DR. 2. 91; 3. 3; 4. 15, 35; referred to at DR. 3. 29.

⁸ Rudraṭa's Kāvyaḷaṃkāra is not mentioned by name.

In addition to differences of wording, which constitute the largest part of these variations, we find also instances of transposition of the lines of stanzas¹ and of assignment of speeches to characters other than those indicated in the printed texts.² In some cases Dhanika does not repeat dramatic quotations in full, but gives merely the first and last words of the passage to which he refers; see, for example, the commentary on DR. 1. 48.

Some of the quotations occur more than once, being used as illustrations of two, or sometimes three, different statements. One of the stanzas drawn from Amaru, for example, appears both at 2. 31 and at 2. 82; a stanza from the Mahāvīracarita is quoted at 2. 1 and recurs at 2. 20 and 4. 22. Usually the passage is repeated in full at each occurrence; occasionally, however, only the opening words are given (cf. the Ratnāvalī quotation at 4. 86, which appears in full at 2. 92). The first illustrative excerpt at 4. 86, although introduced with the statement prāg udāhṛtaḥ, 'previously quoted,' does not occur elsewhere in the commentary. Possibly the words just mentioned have been misplaced and should be connected with the following quotation, which has really occurred before.

Besides referring to actual dramatic works, Dhanika makes mention also of legends and stories on which plays were based. Such are the Udayanacarita, mentioned at DR. 2. 89, and the Samudramanthana, named at DR. 3. 61, although the latter may be actually the name of a drama.

Of particular interest from the point of view of literary chronology is the occurrence in Dhanika's commentary of five stanzas from the Mahānāṭaka, or Hanuman-nāṭaka.³ The source is indicated in only one instance (DR. 2. 1), but the lines are all to be found in the text of the recension published by Jīvānanda Vidyāsāgara. The oldest extant recension of this play, that ascribed to Dāmodara Miśra, dates from the eleventh century, but has been thought, because of its patchwork character, to be merely a revised form of an older work.¹ This supposition is confirmed by the quotations in Dhanika's commentary, which must be from an earlier Hanuman-nāṭaka than the known recensions, since it is hardly probable that all of the five stanzas, occurring at as many different places, are later interpolations. As has previously been pointed out, the four lines quoted at DR. 1. 129 from Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī (a work about half a century later than DR.) are doubtless to be regarded as an interpolation.²

3. CONCERNING PREVIOUS EDITIONS OF THE DAŚARŪPA

Hall's edition. The earliest edition of the Daśarūpa (so far as I am aware), and the only one of any independent value, is that of Fitzedward Hall,³ published at Calcutta in 1865 in the Bibliotheca Indica. The text, as well as the commentary of Dhanika, which accompanies it, was based on a collation of six manuscripts, five of them complete (see Hall, p. 35-36), and is in general very satisfactory. Unfortunately the editor thought it unnecessary to include in the printed volume the 'minute account' of the manuscripts and of their readings which he had taken the pains to prepare (Hall, p. 37), and we are thus left without much of the information that would have been helpful in estimating the correctness of his text. A number of variant readings are recorded, however, on pages 38 and 39, and an introductory paragraph on page 38 gives the impression that many of these were taken from an old copy of the Nāṭyapradīpa, a work which (as Hall mentions) 'repeats verbatim a large portion of the Daśarūpa.' This list of variants was prepared after the text was printed, and such readings as seemed preferable to those in the text were designated with asterisks. In using this list it must be borne in mind that Hall has disregarded the principle of euphonic combination, giving all the readings in the pause-form, according to Hindu practise, as if they stood alone, unconnected with other words. In quoting these I have thought it best to give the form actually required by the context.

The introduction to Hall's edition contains a brief analysis of the work and much illustrative and explanatory material, a large part of which is now naturally antiquated. In addition to the Daśarūpa, the volume contains, as an appendix, the Sanskrit text of four books of the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra, a manuscript of which came into the editor's hands after the completion of the rest of the work. The books are numbered 18, 19, 20, and 34; the last, however, is really book 24. This appendix is of great value and is constantly referred to in the present volume, but it must be said that it contains numerous errors and presents the appearance of a hasty transcript.¹

Jivānanda Vidyāsāgara's edition. The edition published by Jivānanda Vidyāsāgara at Calcutta in 1878 is merely a reprint. Hall's text is reproduced, even to the misprints, without any indication of its source or a single word of acknowledgment. The publisher took no notice of the fact that Hall (on pages 38 and 39) had designated certain variant readings as preferable to those in his text. He likewise failed to correct an error to which Hall calls attention in his introduction; see my notes on DR. 2. 15. The reprint contains no prefatory material or index to give a touch of originality. The four books of the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra are also copied from Hall's edition, with all the misprints and inaccuracies faithfully preserved.

¹See my notes on DR. 1. 80; 3. 63.

Parab's edition. Another reprint of Hall's text, prepared under the supervision of Kāshīnāth Pāṇḍurang Parab, was published by the Nirṇaya Sāgara Press at Bombay in 1897. Here again there is no acknowledgment of indebtedness to Hall's text, which is referred to in the footnotes merely as 'pāṭha.' For no apparent reason, this edition does not follow Hall's numbering of the verses, but adopts a system of its own, which departs from the other sufficiently to cause some difficulty in finding passages referred to by the numbers of the older edition.

This edition is in many respects the most practical of the three. The text embodies all the readings that Hall marked as preferable on pages 38 and 39, and all the variants listed by Hall are given in the footnotes. A group of sections in the first book (I. 53-65; P. I. 32 b-35; H. I. 30 b-32), which were printed as a continuous passage by Hall, are arranged separately, each followed by its own interpretation in the commentary, so as to conform to the rest of the text. The volume contains also a detailed table of contents, a list of the works quoted in the commentary, and an index of all verses thus cited from other authors, with an indication, in many cases, of their source.

4. CONCERNING THE PRESENT EDITION

Constitution of the text. The Sanskrit text contained in the present edition is not based on any new examination of manuscripts¹ and can not, therefore, lay claim to any independent value. Aside from a few corrections, Hall's text is reproduced without change, with the substitution, however, in nearly all cases, of those of his variant readings designated by him as preferable on pages 38 and 39 of his edition. The only departures from Hall's text and variants (that is, from the text as printed by Parab) are the following:

¹ On manuscripts of DR. see Aufrecht, Catalogus Catalogorum, I. 247 b; 2. 53.

For details see the notes on the respective sections.

The numbering of sections. The system of numbering in the edition of Parab differs from that followed by Hall (and reprinted by Vidyāsāgara) sufficiently to interfere with rapid consultation of passages in an edition other than the particular one referred to.¹ Furthermore, the method employed in these editions does not permit of accurate citation, especially of the briefer definitions, without the cumbersome addition of letters and superior figures.² I have accordingly decided, after mature deliberation, while preserving the very practical division into four books, to renumber the work according to logical sections and thus to establish a simple numerical designation for every definition or part of a definition that is separately treated in Dhanika's commentary. At the head of each section I have placed not only the new number thus assigned, but also the number in the editions of Parab and of Hall,³ so that passages may be consulted with convenience in the present volume, no matter to which edition reference is made.

¹ Note, for example, the following variations: P. 1. 67 = H. 1. 60; P. 2. 62 = H. 2. 57; P. 3. 57 = H. 3. 51; P. 4. 67 = H. 4. 61.

² The brief definition of the term parisarpa, DR. 1. 54, had to be cited heretofore as H. 1. 30 b², c¹, or as P. 1. 32 b², 33 a¹. Similarly DR. 3. 8 = H. 3. 7, 8 a¹ = P. 3. 7 b, 8 a, b¹.

The translation. In the translation, which I have aimed to make as nearly literal as possible, it has been found necessary to introduce a considerable number of explanatory words [enclosed in brackets], in order to make clear the precise meaning of the condensed Sanskrit original. Important Sanskrit technical terms have usually been repeated (enclosed in parentheses) in the translation, in their uninflected form, especially where they are defined or explained. The translations adopted for these technical words are not, in many cases, literal renderings of the Sanskrit names (as: bindu, 'drop'; patākā, 'banner'), but are selected with a view to indicating, as far as possible, the special significance of the original. To avoid their being taken in their ordinary English sense they are distinguished by capital initial letters. It was not considered necessary to indicate throughout the special force of the constantly recurring optative verbal forms; such verbs as bhavet or syāt, especially where they occur in mere definitions, are frequently rendered by the simple 'is' or a similar indicative form.

Extracts from the commentary of Dhanika. Under the heading 'Com.' is given the substance (and occasionally a literal translation) of such passages of the commentary as are of particular interest or importance. It was not deemed necessary to present in detail Dhanika's longer theoretical arguments, and these have either been passed over without mention or merely briefly summarized.¹ I have made a special effort, however, to discover and record the source of the numerous illustrative quotations that Dhanika has introduced into his work.² For many references I am indebted to Böhtlingk's valuable collection of material 'Zur Kritik und Erklärung verschiedener indischer Werke' (43. Daçarūpa, in Mélanges asiatiques, 7. 574-577) and to marginal annotations by Böhrtlingk in his copy of Hall's edition, which is now in my possession. The references so obtained I have supplemented by tracing to their source many additional quotations; but a number of the passages quoted by Dhanika still remain unidentified, chiefly because the works from which they were drawn are unpublished or no longer extant. When a stanza not otherwise located appears in native anthologies (such as the Sārngadharapaddhati or the Subhāṣitāvali), in a later work (such as the Bhojaprabandha), or in Böhrtlingk's Indische Sprüche, I have given its number in such collection in place of the usual phrase 'unidentified stanza'²; I have also added references to these works in a number of cases where the original source is known, in order to show that the passage is one that is familiar and often quoted. The editions that have been consulted are recorded on pages xiv-xvii, above.

The notes in this volume. Such explanatory material as it seemed advisable to include in the present work will be found appended to the several sections under the heading 'NOTES,' the necessity of turning to another part of the book for annotations being thus entirely obviated. Among the matters included in the notes may be mentioned particularly the variant readings referred to above (p. xxxix), explanations regarding Dhanamjaya's terminology and definitions, divergencies between the Daśarūpa and other dramaturgic treatises, references to the work of scholars in this field (especially Lévi, Regnaud, and Schmidt), and — a feature to which I have devoted a great amount of time and labor — a collection of references to parallel passages in other Hindu works, chiefly dramaturgic and rhetorical.

These references to native treatises — which will enable the reader to make a comparative study of any special point without a laborious search of his own — are as exhaustive as the material at hand would allow. After a preliminary consultation of the references given in the works of Lévi, Regnaud, and Schmidt

² As, for example, at 2. 42; 4. 16, 17, 27, 28.

(see the Bibliography, p. xiii), all accessible Sanskrit texts dealing with rhetoric and the drama have been carefully searched for passages treating the same topics or defining the same terms as those that appear in the Daśarūpa, and parallel passages in other Sanskrit works have been included wherever possible. The references are preceded in every case by the special symbol ||, the parallel bars being intended to suggest the parallel passages. The order in which the various works are enumerated is in the main chronological, although the date of composition is in many cases merely a matter of conjecture. The Sāhityadarpaṇa, however, though dating from the middle of the fifteenth century, has for reasons of convenience been quoted uniformly in the second place, directly after the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra. Detailed information regarding the editions to which the citations refer will be found on pages xiv–xvii, in the Conspectus of Editions of Texts.

THE DAŚARŪPA

BOOK ONE

1 (P. 1; H. 1).

namas tasmai Gaṇeśāya yatkaṇṭhaḥ puṣkarāyate madābhogaghanadhvāno nīlakaṇṭhasya tāṇḍave.

‘Homage to that Gaṇeśa whose throat, deeply resonant in his excessive frenzy (mada-ābhoga), serves as a drum in the wild dance of Śiva, just as the sound of the wildly expanding thunder-cloud at the dance of the peacock!’

COM. ‘According to established usage’ the author begins his work with two stanzas of invocation. — There is here an imperfect pun (khaṇḍaśleṣa).

NOTES. As noted by the commentator, there is a play on words in this introductory stanza. The entire second line refers to the dance of Śiva, but can also be understood as referring to that of a peacock. In this way a simile is included in the very words to which it refers. This necessitates a double translation of the words in the second line.

2 (P. 2; H. 2).

daśarūpānukāreṇa yasya mādyanti bhāvakāḥ namaḥ sarvavide tasmai Viṣṇave Bharatāya ca.

‘Homage to that omniscient Viṣṇu whose senses revel in the semblance of his ten forms [of incarnation], and to Bharata, whose poetic sensibilities revel in the imitation of the ten forms [of drama] (daśarūpa).’

NOTES. Here again there is a double meaning, in that the first line applies in one sense to Viṣṇu and in another to Bharata. In order to convey this twofold meaning adequately in English, the words of the first line have been rendered twice.

■ A list of abbreviations and symbols will be found on pages xviii-xix; a conspectus of editions of texts referred to, on pages xiv-xvii; remarks concerning the plan of the present volume, on pages xli-xlv.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

3 (P. 3; H. 3).

kasya cid eva kadā cid dayayā viṣayaṃ Sarasvatī viduṣaḥ ghaṭayati kam api tam anyo vrajati jano yena vaidagdhīm.

‘Sarasvatī through her favor furnishes to any intelligent man at any time that subject, whatever it be (kam api), by which somebody else becomes cultured.’

NOTES. The sense is: The goddess Sarasvatī freely provides themes for literary works to persons of intelligence, and through these works culture is diffused among others. — Meter: āryā.

4 (P. 4; H. 4).

nāṭyānāṃ kiṃ tu kiṃ cit pragaṇaracanayā lakṣaṇaṃ saṃkṣipāmi.

‘Who, pray, is able to make a new detailed nomenclature (pratipadam lakṣma) of dramatic science, which Viriñci [i. e. Brahma] created after repeatedly extracting the essence from the entire sacred writ—[that dramatic science] of which Bharata, though a seer, gave an exhibition, Nīlakaṇṭha [i. e. Śiva] performing the wild dance (tāṇḍava) and Śarvāṇī [i. e. Pārvatī] performing the gentle dance (lāsya)? Yet I shall give concisely, in orderly arrangement, some sort of description of dramatic representations.’

NOTES. A reference to the legend of the creation of the drama by Brahma and of the codification and application of its rules by Bharata, the reputed author of the Bhāratīya-nāṭyaśāstra. — Meter: sragdharā. — Cf. Lévi, p. 16.

5 (P. 5; H. 5).

vyākīrṇe mandabuddhīnām jāyate mativibhramah tasyārthas tatpadais tena samkṣipya kriyate 'ñjasā.

'In a diffuse [treatise] there arises confusion of mind on the part of those of slow wit; therefore the import of it [i. e. of the code of dramatic rules] is given concisely and directly in its [own] words.'

NOTES. Cf. Lévi, p. 17.

6 (P. 6; H. 6).

ānandanisyandiṣu rūpakeṣu

yo 'pīti hāsādivad āha sādhus tasmai namaḥ svāduparāṇmukhāya.

'As for any simple man of little intelligence who says that from dramas, which distil joy, the gain is knowledge only, as in the case of history (itihāsa) and the like—homage to him, for he has averted his face from what is delightful!'

COM. Spr. 3122. — The statement is ironical (sollunṭham).

NOTES. Meter: indravajrā. — Cf. Lévi, p. 258.

FUNDAMENTAL DEFINITIONS

7 (P. 7^{a1}; H. 7^{a1}).

avasthānukṛtīr nāṭyaṃ.

'Drama is the imitating of situations.'

NOTES. ||SD. 274; Pratāpar. 3. 1, p. 100. Cf. Lévi, p. 29.

8 (P. 7^{a2}; H. 7^{a2}).

rūpaṃ drśyatayocyate.

'It is called a Show (rūpa, lit. form) because of the fact that it is seen.'

NOTES. Cf. Lévi, p. 29.

9 (P. 7 b¹; H. 7 b¹).

rūpakam tat samāropād.

‘It [is called] Representation (rūpaka) because of the assumption [of parts by actors].’

NOTES. As noted by Lévi, pt. 2, p. 5, the word rūpaka, although merely a variant of the preceding rūpa, is referred by native theorists to the causative form (ropayati) of the root ruh. It is therefore explained here by a compound derivative of the causative, samāropa.

|| SD. 273. Cf. Lévi, p. 29.

10 (P. 7 b²; H. 7 b²).

daśadhaiva rasāśrayam.

‘It is tenfold, and is based on the Sentiments.’

NOTES. With regard to the employment of the different varieties of Sentiment (rasa) in a drama see DR. 3. 36-38.

|| Pratāpar. 3. 1, p. 100 (rasāśraya).

11 (P. 8; H. 8).

nāṭakam saprakaraṇam bhāṇaḥ prahasanaṁ ḍimaḥ vyāyogasamavakārau vīthyaṅkehāmṛgā iti.

‘[The ten chief varieties of drama are]: the Nāṭaka, the Prakaraṇa, the Bhāṇa, the Prahasana, the Ḍima, the Vyāyoga, the Samavakāra, the Vīthī, the Aṅka (= Utsrṣṭikāṅka), and the Īhāmṛga.’

Com. ḍombī śrīgad° [quotation from some treatise; see Lévi, p. 146 and cf. Hem. Kāvyaṇ. 8, p. 327].

NOTES. No mention is here made of the minor forms of drama (cf. Lévi, p. 145); but one of them, the nāṭikā, receives special consideration at DR. 3. 46-52. — This section is quoted at Pratāpar. 3. 2.

|| Bh. 18. 2, 3 a; SD. 275; AP. 337. 1-4; Hem. Kāvyaṇ. 8, p. 317, 327; Vāgbh. Kāvyaṇ. 1, p. 16; Pratāpar. 3. 2. Cf. Lévi, p. 30.

PANTOMIME AND DANCING AS ACCESSORIES

12 (P. 9 a¹; H. 9 a¹).

anyad bhāvāśrayam nṛtyam.

‘Pantomime (nṛtya), which is based on the [emotional] States, is quite another thing.’

NOTES. Pantomime and dancing are probably mentioned here chiefly on account of the similarity of name. The words nāṭya, nṛtya, nṛtta are all derived from the root nṛt or its Prākṛit form naṭ and our author seems to have felt the need of differentiating them. But in Pratāpar. — where we find the terms nṛtya and nṛtta curiously interchanged — the insertion of definitions of these terms is justified as follows: nṛttanṛtyayor nāṭakādyaṅgatvād iha svarūpanirūpaṇaṁ kṛtam (3. 2, p. 101).

|| Pratāpar. 3. 2 a, p. 101. Cf. Lévi, p. 30.

13 (P. 9a²; H. 9a²).

‘Dancing (nṛtta), being based on rhythm and time, [is also different].’

NOTES. || Pratāpar. 3. 2 a, p. 101. Cf. Lévi, p. 30.

14 (P. 9b; H. 9b).

ādyam padārthābhinayo mārgo deśī tathā param.

‘The former, a representation of an object, [is called] “high style” (mārga); the latter, “popular style” (deśī).’

NOTES. Cf. Lévi, pt. 2, p. 5.

15 (P. 10; H. 10).

madhuroddhatabhedena tad dvayaṁ dvividham punaḥ lāsyatāṇḍavarūpeṇa nāṭakādyupakāraḥ.

‘Each of these two is again twofold, through the division into gentle and vehement; and they are auxiliary to the Nāṭaka and the other [varieties of drama] because of the exhibition of the gentle dance (lāśya) and the wild dance (tāṇḍava).’

NOTES. Hindu theoreticians recognize ten forms of the lāśya, which are enumerated at DR. 3. 54. — This section is quoted at Pratāpar. 3. 2, p. 101. — Cf. Lévi, p. 119.

BASIS OF CLASSIFICATION OF DRAMAS

16 (P. 11 a¹; H. 11 a¹).

vastu netā rasas teṣām bhedako.

‘Dramas are classified according to Subject-matter, Hero, and Sentiment.’

NOTES. || Pratāpar. 3. 3. Cf. Lévi, p. 30.

SUBDIVISIONS OF THE SUBJECT-MATTER

17 (P. 11 a²; H. 11 a²).

vastu ca dvidhā.

‘The Subject-matter (vastu) is twofold.’

NOTES. || Bh. 19. 2 a; SD. 296 a. Cf. Lévi, p. 31.

18 (P. 11 b; H. 11 b).

‘The main [theme] is known as the Principal Subject (ādhi-kārika), the subordinate as the Incidental Subject (prāsaṅgika).’

NOTES. || Bh. 19. 2 b; SD. 296 b. Cf. Lévi, p. 31.

19 (P. 12; H. 12).

adhikāraḥ phalasvāmyam adhikārī ca tatprabhuḥ

‘The possession of the desired result [is called] adhikāra, and its possessor [is called] adhikārī; that which contains an incident connected with him [is called] ādhikārika (Principal Subject).’

NOTES. abhivyāpi H, V, P; ativyāpi Hall p. 38.—This is an etymological explanation of the term ādhikārika. See my notes on 4. 8.

'The Incidental Subject (prāsaṅgika) is a purpose of another person [by means] of which one's own purpose is incidentally [furthered].'

NOTES. The craving for etymological interpretation is here satisfied by the use of the word prasaṅgatas, 'incidentally.' See the notes on 4. 8. || Bh. 19. 5 b; SD. 297. Cf. Lévi, p. 31.

NOTES. The insertion of the word ākhyā in the enumeration is due merely to the exigencies of the meter.—Contrary to the usual custom, this section comes after the definitions of the elements mentioned in it, instead of introducing them, in order to avoid a repetition of the definitions of the patākā and the prakarī given in another connection in 1. 21.—This section is quoted in the com. on Hemacandra's Anekārthasamgraha 2. 230 (ed. Zachariae, Vienna, 1893, Extracts from the Com., p. 37, foot), and the second line is quoted ibid. 3. 565 (see Extr., p. 142, middle). The first line is quoted at Pratāpar. 3. 3, p. 105. With the first line compare bijam binduḥ patākā ca, given in explanation of the word arthaprakṛti in the com. on Maṅkhakośa 390 (ed. Zachariae, Vienna, 1897, p. 50).

NOTES. Bh. and SD., evidently on etymological grounds, explain bhedā as a breach of union. As an example SD. quotes Veṇī. 1, p. 12, where Bhima breaks his alliance with his brothers. The SD. commentary adds: ke cit tu bhedaḥ protsāhaneti vadanti, 'some say, however, that the bhedā is an urging on' — which is clearly a reference to the definition of DR. (cf. my notes on I. 55; 2. 70, 71).

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 2, p. 28 [with variations]; Veṇī, in the case of Bhanumati.

NOTES. In SD. this is variously called vidhṛta (ed. Roer), vidhūta (tr. Mitra), and vidhuta (ed. Dviveda and Parab). It is there defined as 'a non-acceptance, at first, of a courtesy,' but the commentary adds: ke cit tu vidhṛtaṃ syād aratir iti vadanti, 'some say, however, that the vidhṛta is absence of pleasure'—which is clearly a reference to the definition of DR. (cf. the notes on I. 50 above).

NOTES. The SD. (355) substitutes for this an element named tāṇana, 'torment,' which it illustrates by the passage from Ratn. (2, p. 28) quoted by Dhanika as an example of the vidhūta (DR. I. 55).

NOTES. No definition of the narmadyuti occurs in the text of Bh. 19 given by Hall, although it is mentioned at 19. 60a, in the preliminary enumeration. Ms. P of that work defines it directly after narman, and that definition is quoted in the commentary on SD. 357 (cf. Lévi, pt. 2, p. 8-9).

NOTES. Lévi observes (p. 45): 'D'après Bharata et Viçvanātha, udāharāṇa désigne l'extraordinaire, le surnaturel.' I cannot find any warrant for this statement. Bh. and SD. are substantially in accord with DR. on this point, and the example given in the SD. commentary is appropriate. The illustration from the Śakuntalā given by Lévi was selected by him in accordance with the statements of the native commentaries (see Lévi, p. 5).

bhāvajñānam athāpare.

‘Others [say it is] a knowledge of the feelings [of another].’

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 3, 11–13, p. 68–70.

‘Outwitting (adhibala) is a [clever] deception.’

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 3, p. 66.

NOTES. For another definition see the com. on the following section. — This adhibala must not be confused with the adhibala defined at 3. 20. — The word abhibala in Roer’s text of SD. 375 is clearly a misprint. The correct form adhibala occurs in the preliminary enumeration, SD. 365 c.

77 (P. 40b²; H. 37b²).

‘Quarrel (toṭaka) is an angry speech.’

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 3, p. 78-79; Veṇī. 3. 34-46, p. 87-93. Quotation from some other treatise:

‘The learned say that the adhibala is another form of toṭaka.’ Ex.: Ratn. 3, p. 71. [Continuation of the quotation:]

‘Quarrel (toṭaka) is declared to be the speech of angry persons.’ [Or ‘an angry speech.’] Ex.: Ratn. 3, p. 70; Veṇī. 4, p. 106-107 [with variations].

NOTES. I follow Hall in regarding these interpolated definitions as part of the commentary, rather than of the text. The first seems to connect (or confuse) this adhibala with the adhibala defined at 3. 20; the second is a mere repetition of the definition of the toṭaka given by DR. Parab prints them in the same type as the text, with the number 41.—In SD. the subdivision defined in this section is called troṭaka.

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 3, p. 73, 78, 80; Venī. 4, p. 105.—The most important of these subdivisions of the Development are: Mis-statement, Indication, Quarrel, Outwitting, and Revelation. The others are employed when possible. [Cf. SD. 405, com.; Pratāpar. 3. 13, end.]

NOTES. Bh. gives a definition similar to the above, but employs the designation upakṣipta (as one must emend, following Lévi, p. 47.) In the preliminary summary (Bh. 19. 63 a) it is called ākṣipta, with the change of prefix frequently necessitated by the meter in technical treatises of this kind. The text of Bh. given by Hall, which unfortunately shows evidences of hasty preparation, has prārthanā kṣipram (for prārthanākṣiptam = prārthanā + ākṣiptam) in 19. 63 a, and upasthitam (for upakṣiptam) in 19. 86 a. The Ms. P of Bh. reads kṣipti (Lévi, p. 47).—SD., under the designation kṣipti, gives a somewhat different definition and an obscure example.—Pratāpar. has the following definition: iṣṭārthopāyanusaraṇam ākṣepaḥ.

Bh. 19. 85 b and SD. 372 mention and define a thirteenth division of the Development, the prārthanā, ‘Invitation’, a summons to enjoyment or festivity. This is inserted so that those who exclude the Benediction (praśasti) from the number of divisions of the Conclusion (nirvahaṇa) may still have the full complement of 64 subdivisions (SD. 372, com).

vidravo vadhabandhādir.

'Tumult (vidrava) is slaying, taking prisoner, and the like.'

COM. Ex.: yenāvṛtya mukh°, stanza from the Chalitārāma [an unpublished drama]; Ratn. 4. 14, p. 99; Ratn. 4, p. 99 [with many variations].

NOTES. In Bh. and SD. vidrava is used as the equivalent of the term sambhrama defined at DR. 1. 79. In place of vidrava as a subdivision of the avamarśa Bh. substitutes an element called vyāhāra, which is defined at 19. 94 b as 'a relating of what one has seen in person'; SD. 385 substitutes kheda, 'Lassitude,' with an example from Mālatīm. 6.—For vadhabandha see Mānavadharmasāstra 5. 49.

‘The Conclusion (nirvahaṇa) is that [Juncture] in which the matters that occurred in the Opening (mukha) and in the other Junctures, and that contained the Germ (bīja) and were distributed in due order, are brought together to one end.’

COM. Ex.: Venī. 6, p. 202; Ratn. 4, p. 103.

NOTES. In 1. 36, where the names of the five Junctures are given, the concluding one, here called nirvahaṇa, is designated as upasaṃhṛti. The same change of name is found also in SD. (cf. 332, 337), and the two terms may be regarded as synonymous. — Bh. has nībarhaṇa.

‘Minute details of the subject-matter that are deficient in Sentiment and unsuitable are [merely] to be intimated in it [i. e. in the play]; but what has constantly sweet and exalted Sentiments and States is to be presented in action.’

NOTES. For an enumeration of actions considered unsuitable for actual presentation in the play see 3. 39. Cf. Lévi, p. 57.

THE FIVE KINDS OF INTERMEDIATE SCENE

115 (P. 58; H. 52).

arthopakṣepakaiḥ sūcyam pañcabhiḥ pratipādayet viṣkambhacūlikāṅkāśyāṅkāvatārapraveśakaiḥ.

‘What is to be [merely] intimated one should make clear by means of the five Intermediate Scenes (arthopakṣepaka), [namely]: the Explanatory Scene (viṣkambha), the Intimation-scene (cūlikā), the Anticipatory Scene (aṅkāśya), the Continuation-scene (aṅkāvatāra), and the Introductory Scene (praveśaka)’.

NOTES. || Bh. 19. 109; SD. 305, 308 a, b; Pratāpar. 3. 18. Cf. Lévi, p. 59.

116 (P. 59; H. 53 a, b).

vṛttavartīṣyamāṇānāṃ kathāṃsānāṃ nidarśakah

‘The Explanatory Scene (viṣkambha = viṣkambhaka), which is presented by middling characters and is for the purpose of condensing, explains parts of the story that have happened or are about to happen.’

NOTES. This is called viṣkambhaka in Bh. and SD. and also in many dramas; DR. often uses the form viṣkambha.—In explanation of the viṣkambhaka the com. on Maṅkhakośa 563 (ed. Zachariae, Vienna, 1897, p. 77) quotes Bh. 18. 35.

|| Bh. 19. 110; 18. 34, 51; SD. 308 c, d; Pratāpar. 3. 19. Cf. Lévi, p. 59.

117 (P. 60 a; H. 53 c).

ekānekakṛtaḥ śuddhaḥ saṃkīrṇo nīcamadhyamaiḥ.

‘When performed by one or more persons [of one class], it [is called] pure (śuddha); when by inferior and middling [characters], it [is called] mixed (saṃkīrṇa).’

NOTES. The pure variety is a soliloquy or a dialogue in Sanskrit and is presented by one or two middle-class characters; the mixed variety is in Prākṛit and is presented by middling and inferior characters together (whence the designation).

tadvad evānudāttoktyā nīcapātraprayojitaḥ

‘The Introductory Scene (praveśa = praveśaka), which is quite similar [to the preceding] and is performed by inferior characters in language that is not elevated, explains, between two Acts, matters that have been omitted.'

COM. The phrase 'between two acts' prohibits the use of the Introductory Scene in the first act.

NOTES. 'ñkadvayasyāntaḥ H, V, P; °nte Hall p. 38. — The praveśaka, as distinguished from the viṣkambhaka, is always in Prakrit. Gray, JAOS. 25. 205, note 1, rightly protests against the misleading translation 'interlude,' which has an entirely different connotation in English.

aṅkāntapātrair aṅkāsyam chinnāṅkasyārthasūcanāt.

'The Anticipatory Scene (aṅkāsyā) [is so called] because of the allusion by characters at the end of an Act to the subject of the following Act [lit. of an Act that is detached (from it)].'

COM. Ex.: Mahāvīra. 2, p. 87; 3, p. 89.

NOTES. In Bh. and SD. this is called aṅkamukha in both summary and definition; here only aṅkāsyā (aṅka + āsyā). The variation is of no significance, since āsyā and mukha are synonymous. — SD. gives, in addition to the explanation of aṅkāsyā as a reference to the opening of the succeeding act (313), another interpretation (312) as a part of an act in which the subject of all the acts is intimated. The former is included on the authority of Dhanika; the latter seems to be an original interpretation intended to differentiate the aṅkamukha more clearly from the aṅkāvatāra, with which some persons (according to SD. 313, com.) claimed it was identical.

|| Bh. 19. 116; SD. 312, 313; Pratāpar. 3. 21. Cf. Lévi, p. 60.

añkāvatāras tv añkānte pāto 'ñkasyāvibhāgataḥ

'The Continuation-scene (añkāvatāra) is the occurrence of an Act at the end of [the previous] Act, without separation from it.—By means of these [Intermediate Scenes just enumerated] one should intimate what is to be intimated; [but] what is to be seen one should represent by means of the acts [themselves].'

Com. Ex. of añkāvatāra: Mālav. I, p. 21 [with variants].

NOTES. pāto 'ñkasyā° H, V, P; pātrāñkasyā° Hall p. 38.—The Continuation-scene is evidently a continuation of the action by the same characters in a succeeding act, without other interruption than the technical separation between the acts. A remarkable instance of the application of this device on the modern stage is to be found in a drama by Charles Rann Kennedy, The Servant in the House (published at New York, 1908), in which every act is thus continued in the following one.—The Continuation-scene does not seem to belong properly in the category of Intermediate Scenes, according to the definition of these in the latter part of this section; it is not clear how it informs the audience of matters that cannot be presented on the stage (cf. I. 114).

tripatākākareṇānyān apavāryāntarā kathām anyonyāmantraṇam yat syāj janānte taj janāntikam.

‘Personal Address (janāntika) is mutual conversation in the presence of [other] persons by shutting out the others in the middle of a story by the hand with three fingers raised (tripatākā).’

NOTES. The word tripatākā, explained briefly in the commentary on this section and in detail in Bh. 9. 28–38, designates the hand with three fingers outstretched, the thumb and ring-finger being curved inward. As can be seen from the passage of Bh. referred to, this was one of the conventional gestures of the Hindu stage.—For an example of the janāntika see Śakuntalā 6. 24 +, p. 221.

rahasyam kathyate 'nyasya parāvṛtṭyā 'pavāritam.

NOTES. The apavārita is understood to be heard only by the person addressed.

‘When [one actor] alone, without [another] actor [on the stage] says ‘Do you say so?’ or the like, as if hearing something, though it is [really] not spoken, that is [called] Conversation with Imaginary Persons (ākāśabhāṣita).’

COM. ‘Some persons name other dramatic rules besides, such as prathamakalpa [cf. Lévi, pt. 2, p. 12], etc., but no definition of them is given in this work, because they are not ordained by Bharata, are not mentioned in lexicons, consist in the use of dialect by some characters, and are really not dramatic rules at all.’

NOTES. This device is frequently employed in the Bhāṇa, or Monologue; see DR. 3. 53. An interesting illustration of its use is found at the opening of the second act of the Mudrārākṣasa. For an Occidental parallel see Maeterlinck, L'Oiseau bleu, beginning of tableau 5, act 3 (ed. Paris, 1911, p. 108-109).

CONCLUSION OF THE FIRST BOOK

129 (P. 68; H. 61).

‘After examining the entire body of divisions of the subject-matter here [presented] in these and the following [sections], as well as the Rāmāyaṇa and the like, and the Bṛhatkathā, one should thereupon compose a story diversified with the appropriate selection of Hero and Sentiments, together with amplifications of appropriate and pleasing words.'

COM. As, for example, the drama Mudrārākṣasa, which is based on the Bṛhatkathā; or the story of Rāma, originally told in the Rāmāyaṇa. [The mention of the Bṛhatkathā is followed, in the text of the commentary, by two ślokaś from Kṣemendra's Bṛhatkathāmañjarī (2. 216, 217). These are doubtless to be regarded as an interpolation; see my Introduction, page xxxiii.]

raktalokaḥ śucir vānmī rūdhavaṃśaḥ sthīro yuvā buddhyutsāhasmṛtiprajñākālāmānasamanvitaḥ śūro dṛḍhaś ca tejasvī śāstracakṣuś ca dhārmikaḥ.

‘The Hero should be well-bred, charming, liberal, clever, affable, popular, upright, eloquent, of exalted lineage, resolute, and young; endowed with intelligence, energy, memory, wisdom, [skill in the] arts, and pride; heroic, mighty, vigorous, familiar with the codes, and a just observer of laws.’

Com. Ex.: Mahāvīra. 4. 21, p. 146 (well-bred); Mahāvīra. 2. 36, p. 75 (gentle); Spr. 1547 (liberal); Mahāvīra. 1. 53, p. 37 [quoted also at DR. 2. 16] (clever); Mahāvīra. 2. 35, p. 75 (affable); Mahāvīra. 4. 44, p. 164 (popular); Raghuvamśa 16. 8 (upright); Mahānātaka 2. 14, p. 52 [= Bālarāmāyaṇa 4. 60, p. 108] (eloquent); Anargharāghava 3. 21, p. 123 (of exalted lineage); Mahāvīra. 3. 8, p. 95 [quoted also at DR. 2. 20 and 4. 22] (resolute); Bhartṛhari, Nītiś. 27 = Spr. 4342 (resolute); Mālav. 1. 5, p. 8 (possessed of knowledge).

THE FOUR TYPES OF HERO

2 (P. 3 a; H. 2 c).

bhedaiś caturdhā lalitaśāntodāttoddhatair ayam.

‘He [i. e. the Hero] is of four kinds, being light-hearted (lalita), calm (śānta), exalted (udatta), or vehement (uddhata).’

NOTES. In the definitions of these four kinds of hero, which follow in sections 3-6, each of the terms lalita, śānta, etc. has prefixed to it the word dhīra, 'self-controlled,' in order to indicate that the hero, unlike the heroine, must always have himself under control.—The Sāhityasāra mentions only the first three types.

'The self-controlled and light-hearted [Hero] (dhīra-lalita) is free from anxiety, fond of the arts [song, dance, etc.], happy, and gentle.'

mahāsattvo 'tigambhīraḥ kṣamāvān avikatthanah

'The self-controlled and exalted [Hero] (dhīrodatta) is of great excellence, exceedingly serious, forbearing, not boastful, resolute, with self-assertion suppressed, and firm of purpose.'

COM. Ex.: Nāgān. 5. 15, p. 89 [quoted also at DR. 2. 23]; Mahānāṭaka 3. 25, p. 97 [quoted also at DR. 2. 19]. The objection may be raised by some that Jīmūtavāhana, the hero of the Nāgānanda, belongs more properly in the category of 'calm' heroes, as would appear from Nāgān. 1. 6, p. 4 and 1. 4, p. 3. But [says Dhanika] he is really an 'exalted' hero, in spite of his great tranquillity, profound sympathy, and lack of passion, and his disregard for personal pleasure is due to a desire for achievement, such as is seen also in Śakuntalā 5. 7, p. 158 (= Spr. 7328). [For details of the argument see Lévi, p. 65-66.]

NOTES. || Bh. 24. 5 b; SD. 66; Sarasv. 5. 558 (ed. B. p. 343); Hem. Kāvyaṇ. 7, p. 299; Pratāpar. 1. 28; Sāhityasāra 11. 3. Cf. Lévi, p. 65-66.

darpamātsaryabhūyiṣṭho māyāchadmaparāyaṇaḥ

'The self-controlled and vehement [Hero] (dhīroddhata) is altogether dominated by pride and jealousy, wholly devoted to magic practices and deceit, self-assertive, fickle, irascible, and boastful.'

COM. Ex.: Mahāvira. 2. 16, p. 57; trailokyaiśvarya^o [unidentified passage]. — The principal hero must be of one of the four kinds just defined throughout the drama, to insure unity; a secondary hero may, however, evince varying characteristics under different circumstances, as in the case of Paraśurāma in the Mahāvīracarita, who appears as 'exalted' in 2. 10, p. 51 [quoted also at DR. 4. 23 and Kāvyaṇ. 5, p. 169]; as 'vehement' in 2. 16, p. 57 [quoted above]; and as 'calm' in 4. 22, p. 147 [quoted also at DR. 2. 89]. [For details of the argument see Lévi, p. 67-68.]

NOTES. || Bh. 24. 5 a; SD. 67; Sarasv. 5. 555 (ed. B. p. 342); Hem. Kāvyaṇ. 7, p. 299; Pratāpar. 1. 30. Cf. Lévi, p. 66-68.

11 (P. 7 b²; H. 6 c²).

'nukūlas tv ekanāyikaḥ.

'A faithful [Hero] (anukūla) [is one that] has only a single lady-love.'

COM. Ex.: Uttarārāma. i. 39, p. 37.—The question arises as to the classification of heroes of the Nāṭikā, such as King Vatsa in the Ratnāvalī, who are at first faithful and later unfaithful but courteous. They are not to be regarded as 'deceitful' and 'shameless,' even though they at first conceal their love and afterwards openly confess it, for they always retain some affection for their previous love, as can be seen from the works of the great poets (for example, snātā tiṣṭhati kunta^o [unidentified stanza, quoted also at SD. 71]) and from Bharata (Bh. 23. 54). Hence such a hero is to be regarded as 'clever.'

Since each of the sixteen varieties [produced by the combination of the four kinds mentioned in sections 3-6 with those mentioned in sections 8-11] may be superior, intermediate, or inferior, there are 48 varieties of hero [cf. Bh. 24. 2; SD. 75; Kumārasvāmin on Pratāpar. i. 27; Śukasaptati, text. simpl. 57 (p. 162, l. 4-9); and see Schmidt, p. 158-160].

THE OPPONENT OF THE HERO

14 (P. 9b; H. 8b).

lubdho dhīroddhataḥ stabdhaḥ pāpakṛd vyasanī ripuḥ.

‘The Opponent [of the Hero] is avaricious, [of the type known as] self-controlled and vehement (dhīroddhata), stubborn, criminal, and vicious.’

COM. Rāvaṇa, for example, is the opponent of Rāma, and Duryodhana the opponent of Yudhiṣṭhira.

NOTES. The technical term for this type of character is pratīnāyaka, ‘counter-hero.’ The use of the word ripu here is due to metrical exigencies. — Hem. Kāvya. (7, p. 308) mentions also a pratīnāyikā as a foil to the heroine. DR. makes no mention of such a character.

QUALITIES OF THE HERO

15 (P. 10; H. 9).

śobhā vilāso mādhyamam gāmbhīryam sthairyatejasi lalitaudāryam ity aṣṭau sattvajāḥ pauraṣā guṇāḥ.

‘The eight manly qualities that spring from one’s nature are: Beauty of Character (śobhā), Vivacity (vilāsa), Equanimity

(mādhurya), Poise (gāmbhīrya), Firmness (sthairya), Sense of Honor (tejas), Lightheartedness (lalita), and Magnanimity (audārya).'

NOTES. sthairya° Hall p. 38, P; dhairya° H, V (Bh. has sthairya; SD., dhairya). Hall remarks (p. 16, n. 3): 'The dhairya of my printed text, in the ninth stanza, is clearly a clerical error for sthairya.' In spite of this plain statement and the occurrence of the correct word in DR. 2. 20, Vidyasāgara's reprint of the text repeats the incorrect reading; see my remarks on that edition in the Introduction. — sattvajāḥ H, V, P; sāttvikāḥ Hall p. 38 (SD. has sattvajāḥ).

Five of these technical terms reappear below in the enumeration of the graces of women: śobhā (2. 53), vilāsa (2. 61), mādhurya (2. 55), lalita (2. 68), audārya (2. 58). In their application to feminine charms they have a different meaning, and they are therefore rendered in that connection by another set of English terms.

‘Magnanimity (audārya) is the giving up of even as much as (ā) one’s life with a kindly word, [and] the propitiation of the virtuous.’

COM. Ex.: Nāgān. 5. 15, p. 89 [quoted also at DR. 2. 5]; Kumārasambhava 6. 63 (propitiation).

NOTES. I take priyoktyā to represent priyoktyā (instrumental) + ā (prepositional adv. with jīvitād).

THE THREE KINDS OF HEROINE

24 (P. 15 a; H. 14 a).

svā ’nyā sādharmastrī ’ti tadguṇā nāyikā tridhā.

‘The Heroine (nāyikā) is of three kinds: [the Hero’s] own wife (svā), [a woman who is] another’s (anyā), or a common woman (sādhāraṇastrī); and she has his [i. e. the Hero’s] qualities.’

NOTES. A diagram illustrating Dhanamjaya’s classification of the types of heroine will be found on p. 149. — Bh. 24. 7–10 presents a different classification recognizing four varieties: divyā, nṛpaṭnī, kulastrī, gaṇikā.

'[The Hero's] own wife (svīyā = svā), who is possessed of good character, uprightness, and the like, [may be] inexperienced (mugdhā), partly experienced (madhyā), or experienced (pragalbā).'

COM. Ex.: Hāla 871 (good character); Hāla 867 (uprightness); Hāla 866 [quoted also at SD. 97] (modesty).

mugdhā navavayaḥkāmā ratau vāmā mṛduḥ krudhi.

'The inexperienced [kind of wife] (mugdhā) has the desire of new youth, is coy in love and gentle in anger.'

COM. Ex.: Spr. 6238 (youth); ucchvasan°, stanza by Dhanika (youth); dṛṣṭiḥ sālāsā° [unidentified stanza, quoted also at DR. 2. 50] (desire); Kumārasambhava 8. 2 [quoted also at DR. 4. 61] (coyness in rati); Subhāṣitāvalī 2060 (gentleness in anger); na madhye saṃskāraṃ kusum° [unidentified stanza] (passion concealed because of modesty).

NOTES. In most rhetorical treatises the mugdhā is not further subdivided (cf. DR. 2. 31, com.: mugdhā tv ekaṛūpaiva; see also Schmidt, p. 262-263; 2d ed., p. 191), but Rasamañjarī, Rasaratnahāra, and Bhāṣābhūṣaṇa mention two varieties of mugdhā.

Com. Ex.: ālāpān bhrū° [unidentified stanza] (youth); Amaru 60 (love); Hāla 5 (sambhoga).

NOTES. °yāvanānaṅgā H, V, P; clearly a mistake for °yauvanānaṅgā, which I adopt.—The term madhyā is here used to designate the kind of wife intermediate between the mugdhā and the pragalbhā. For another use of the word see 2. 30, notes.

Com. Ex.: Māgha 7. 53 (self-controlled); Amaru 50 = Spr. 4443 (partly self-controlled); Spr. 5447 (without self-control); Subhāṣitāvalī 2071 (other methods of procedure than those mentioned).

‘The experienced [kind of wife] (pragalbhā) is blinded by youth, crazed with love, infatuated, and clinging, as it were, to the body of her husband for joy even at the beginning of love's pleasures.’

COM. Ex.: abhyunnata°, stanza by Dhanika [tr. Lévi, p. 74] (youth); Spr. 7183 (youth); Amaru 2. 63, p. 128 = Spr. 3246 (emotion); Amaru 97 (rati); Amaru 65 (other methods of procedure than those mentioned).

NOTES. For pragalbhā Sāhityasāra substitutes the term ādhyā (the com. explains: ādhyatvam prāgalbhyam eva); Pratāpar. and Vāgbh. Kāvyañ. employ the synonymous designation prauḍhā.

|| SD. 101; Rudr. Śrṅg. 1. 69, 74; Rudr. Kāvyañ. 12. 24, 25; Sarasv. 5. 568 (ed. B. p. 344); Vāgbh. Kāvyañ. 5, p. 62; Rasamañjarī, p. 34; Pratāpar. 1. 56; Rasaratn. 12 b; Bhāṣābhūṣaṇa 12 b; Ratirahasya 1. 14, 15 (ZDMG. 57, p. 711). Cf. Schmidt, p. 264-266 (2d ed., p. 192-194); Lévi, p. 74.

sāvahitthādarodāste ratau dhīretarā krudhā saṃtarjya tāḍayen madhyā madhyādhīreva taṃ vadet.

'In her anger an [experienced wife who is] self-controlled (dhīrā) is pretendedly respectful (sāvahitthādarā) and is indifferent to the pleasures of love; the other [i. e. one who is lacking in self-control (adhīrā)] is wont to scold and strike [her husband]; one who is partly self-controlled (madhyā) is wont to speak to him like a partly experienced [wife] who is lacking in self-control (madhyādhīrā).'

COM. Ex.: Amaru 17 = Spr. 1363 (pretended respect); Amaru 63 (indifference to rati); Amaru 10 = Spr. 1938 (rebuks and striking); Amaru 33 = Spr. 1939 (like madhyādhīrā).

NOTES. madhyā H, V, P; kāntam Hall p. 38.—A further threefold division of the madhyā and the pragalbhā—not otherwise referred to in the present work—is implied in sections 28 and 30. In the expression of their anger heroines of these two varieties may be self-controlled (dhīrā), lacking in self-control (adhīrā), or of an intermediate type called either madhyā, as in the second line above, or dhīrādhīrā (dhīrā + adhīrā), as in Dhanika's commentary and several of the other treatises (cf. Rasamañjarī, p. 41; Bhāṣābhūṣaṇa 23).

Both of these designations of the intermediate type cause occasional obscurity. The term madhyā is easily confused with the madhyā that denotes the intermediate between mugdhā and pragalbhā (see DR. 2. 27). The term dhīrādhīrā, which avoids this duplication of terms, is a source of difficulties of another kind. In Hem. Kāvyañ. 7, p. 303, for example, we find the remarkable statement dhīrādhīrādhīrādhīrābhedād antye tredhā, which seems unintelligible until the first element is analyzed as dhīrā + dhīrā-adhīrā + adhīrā. Similarly in Rasaratn. 14 a: dhīrādhīrā tathā dhīrādhīreti trividhe striyaṁ.—In the word madhyādhīrā (madhyā + adhīrā) in the second line of the text above, the former element designates the 'partly experienced' type of wife (see 2. 27, notes).

dvedhā jyeṣṭhā kaniṣṭhā cety amugdhā dvādaśoditāḥ.

'[The varieties of wife-heroine] other than the inexperienced are said to be twelve [in number], being [each again] of two kinds: older (jyeṣṭhā) and younger (kaniṣṭhā).'

Com. There is only one type of mugdhā. The other six varieties [the three kinds of madhyā (2. 28) and the three kinds of pragalbhā (2. 30)] are each twofold. Ex.: Amaru 18 = Spr. 2937 [quoted also at DR. 2. 82]; Vāsavadattā and Ratnāvalī in the drama Ratnāvalī. Aside from the mugdhā there are thus twelve varieties [cf. SD. 108 a, b].

'A woman who is another's (anyastrī) is either a maiden or a married woman. A woman who is married to another should never [figure] in the principal Sentiment; [but] love for a maiden one may employ at will, in connection with the principal or the subordinate Sentiments.'

Com. Ex.: Śārṅg. 3769 (love for the wife of another); the love of the hero for Sāgarikā in the Ratnāvalī, and that of the hero for Malaya-vaṭī in the Nāgānanda (love for a maiden).

NOTES. icchātaḥ H, V, P; anvicchan Hall p. 38.—The usual designation for this type of heroine is parakīyā, but anyā, anyadīyā, and anyastrī are also found.—On the principal and subordinate Sentiments see 3. 38; 4. 1, 52.

‘She gratifies, as if she were in love with them, those that conceal their amours, those that obtain wealth easily, the foolish, the self-willed, the selfish, and the impotent, as long as they have money; when they are without funds she has them turned out of doors by her mother.’

NOTES. The compound sukhārtha might also be translated ‘those that have pleasure as their [sole] aim,’ but the corresponding expressions in other works (sukhaprāptadhana, Rudr. Śṛṅg. and SD.; sukhaprāptavitta, Vāgbh. Kāvyaṇ.) show that it means ‘those that obtain wealth easily.’ Dhanika gives both interpretations without deciding on their merits.

raktaiva tv aprahasane naiṣā divyaṇṛpāśraye.

‘[She should be presented as] in love [with the Hero] except in a Prahasana; she should not [figure] in a drama concerned with a celestial king.’

COM. Except in a Prahāsana, a courtesan may be enamored of the hero, like Vasantasenā in the Mṛcchakaṭikā. In the Prahāsana she should not be in love, for the sake of the comic effect. She must not be introduced in a drama whose hero is a celestial king.

Rasamañjarī (p. 184-185), Rasaratnahāra (42 b), and Bhāṣābhūṣaṇa (20 b) mention an additional type called proṣitaṭṭriyā or pravatsyātṭriyā, ‘one whose husband is about to depart.’ Cf. Schmidt, p. 307-309 (2d ed., p. 226-228).

‘Heroines of the last six varieties are characterized by reflection, sighing, dejection, weeping, change of color, weakness, and absence of ornaments; those of the first two varieties, by playfulness, radiance, and joy.’

COM. The heroine connected with another, whether maiden or wife, can not be of all these varieties. For example, Mālavikā, in Mālav. 4. 14, p. 79, etc., should not be considered as khaṇḍitā. [For details of the argument see Lévi, p. 78.]

NOTES. For a still further subdivision of the heroine see Schmidt, p. 310-314 (2d ed., p. 228-232). According to the passages cited there—to which might be added Sarasv. 5. 107, 110 a (ed. B. 5. 108, 111 a)—each of the varieties thus far enumerated may be either uttamā, madhyamā, or adhamā. We thus arrive, by successive multiplication, at the grand total of 384 varieties (see SD. 122; Rudr. Śrng. 1. 154, 155; Rudr. Kāvya. 12, p. 155 [supposed interpolation]; Rasamañjarī, p. 105; and cf. Schmidt, p. 315; 2d ed., p. 232). The DR. does not mention this last differentiation (except in a general way at 2. 75) and so admits of but 128 varieties.

Rasamañjarī (p. 106) adds: yat tv etāsāṃ divyādivyobhayabhedaṇa gaṇanayā dvipañcāsādhikaśatayutam sahasraṃ bhedā bhavanti, thus claiming the existence of 1152 varieties of heroine!

‘Three of them are physical: Feeling (bhāva), Emotion (hāva), and Passion (helā). These seven qualities come of their own accord: Beauty (śobhā), Loveliness (kānti), Radiance (dīpti), Sweetness (mādhurya), Courage (pragalbhatā), Dignity (audārya), and Self-control (dhairya).’

NOTES. The three qualities in the first group, forming a progressive series of manifestations of love, are defined in sections 50-52; the seven components of the second group, which are inherent characteristics of the heroine, are treated in sections 53-59; the members of the third group are enumerated in the following section (49).

The terms śobhā, mādhurya, and audārya occur also in the list of qualities of the hero; see DR. 2. 15 and the notes on that section.

Pratāpar. omits śobhā, kānti, dīpti, pragalbhya, and audārya; it adds, however, three other qualities named kutūhala, cakita, and hasita (4. 65, 66, 68, p. 269-270), thus bringing the number up to eighteen. The list in Sarasv. shows similar variations. — In the Alaṃkāraśekhara these qualities are enumerated as Consequents (see DR. 4. 3).

‘A minister (mantrin), [or the Hero] himself, or both [together] are his [i. e. the Hero's] assistants in deliberations on affairs of state.’

NOTES. This section is criticized by Viśvanātha, SD. 80, com., on the ground that it belongs rather to a treatment of the means of handling affairs of state than to an account of assistants in that task; and that, furthermore, the mere statement ‘The minister is the assistant in deliberations on affairs of state’ would have sufficed to show the participation of the hero.

mantrinā lalitāḥ śeṣā mantrīsvāyattasiddhayaḥ.

‘A Hero [of the kind known as] light-hearted has his affairs attended to by a minister; the other [kinds of Hero], by their ministers and themselves.’

NOTES. This section is criticized by Viśvanātha, SD. 80, com., on the ground that, from the mere characterization of the ‘light-hearted’ hero, it is clear that he leaves his affairs of state entirely to his minister. And, if that is the case, the minister is not an assistant in these affairs at all, since he has complete charge of them.

THE GAY STYLE OF PROCEDURE

77 (P. 47; H. 44 a, b).

tadvyāpārātmikā vṛttiś caturdhā tatra kaiśikī gītanṛtyavilāsādyair mṛduḥ śṛṅgāraceṣṭitaiḥ.

‘The Style of Procedure which is based on his [i. e. the Hero’s] conduct is of four kinds. Of these [four Styles of Procedure] the Gay Style (kaiśikī) is delightful through its outward expressions of love, [such as] song, dance, coquetry, and the like.’

NOTES. On the character and legendary origin of the Styles of Procedure see Lévi, p. 87-89. The four Styles are: kaiśikī (2. 77), sāttvatī (2. 83), ārabhaṭī (2. 88), and bhāraṭī (3. 5).

‘Pleasantry (narman) is clever jesting that serves to conciliate the beloved. It is of three kinds, according as it is done merely in fun, or through love, or through fear. [Pleasantry] connected with love is of three kinds also, [being caused] by an allusion to oneself, by [manifestation of a desire for] enjoyment, or by [show of] jealousy. [Pleasantry connected with fear is twofold, either pure or subordinated [to some other sentiment]. The comic element as a whole is [furthermore] of three kinds, that of words, that of costumes, and that of action. Consequently Pleasantry is said to be eighteenfold.’

COM. Ex.: Kumārasambhava 7. 19 (Pleasantry in words); the incident of the vidūṣaka and Śekharaka in Nāgān. (Pleasantry in costume); in Mālav., the scene where Nipunikā drops a stick upon the awakening vidūṣaka, who takes it to be a snake (Pleasantry in action); madhyāhnaṃ gama° [unidentified stanza] (Pleasantry connected with love, allusion to oneself); Hāla 130 (manifestation of desire for pleasure); Māgha 11. 33 (show of jealousy); Ratn. 2, p. 46 [with variations] (Pleasantry connected with fear); abhirvayaktālikah sakala°, stanza by Dhanika [quoted also at DR. 4. 69] (Pleasantry connected with fear subordinate to love).

NOTES. This narman must not be confused with the term narman, 'Joke,' defined at 1. 57.

COM. Ex.: Amaru 18 = Spr. 2937 [quoted also at DR. 2. 31]; as in the case of the appearance of Vatsarāja himself in place of Susaṃgatā [error! it is Manoramā] dressed up as Vatsarāja, in the play within a play in the drama Priyadarśika.

viśokā sāttvatī sattvaśauryatyāgadayārjavaiḥ

'The Grandiose Style (sāttvatī) is free from grief [and is characterized] by [examples of] virtue, courage, self-sacrifice, compassion, and uprightness. [The four divisions] in it are Discourse (saṃlāpa = saṃlāpaka), Challenge (utthāpaka), Breach of Alliance (sāṃghātya), and Change of Action (parivartaka).'

NOTES. °ārjavaiḥ, corrected in accordance with SD. 416 a; °ājjavaiḥ H, V, P. The latter reading is probably due to a typographical blunder in Hall's text, copied without change in the later editions of the text. The word ārjava is far more appropriate to the passage than java, the last component of the compound in the printed texts. The gloss of the commentary, harṣa, does not explain either word.

The followers of Udbhaṭa, when mentioning the Gay, the Grandiose, and the Horrific Style of Procedure [in addition to the Eloquent Style], recognize [also] a fifth Style.'

NOTES. The bhāratī, which differs from the other Styles in that it consists chiefly of declamation as distinguished from action, is defined at

'The Gay Style [is to be used] in [expressing] the Erotic Sentiment; the Grandiose Style in [expressing] the Heroic Sentiment; the Horrific Style, on the other hand, in [expressing] the Furious and Odious Sentiments; the Eloquent Style everywhere.'

NOTES. The word ca in the second line connects raudre and bibhatse, a second ca after the latter word being omitted, as is occasionally the case (cf. for example Mānavadharmasāstra 3. 20; 9. 322). — Mitra (SD. tr. p. 219) mistranslates SD. 410, which is identical with this section of DR.

According to Bh., each of the Styles may be employed in connection with three of the Sentiments: the Gay Style in the Comic, Erotic and Pathetic; the Grandiose Style in the Heroic, Furious, and Marvelous; the Horrific Style in the Terrible, Odious, and Furious; the Eloquent Style in the Heroic, Furious, and Marvelous. CONCLUSION OF THE SECOND BOOK

‘Who but Bharata or the crescent-crested god [Śiva] is able to enumerate without omission [all] the varieties of action, the qualities, the utterances, and the Involuntary States (sattva-bhāva) that are inseparable from (a-vibhinna) the ten varieties of leading character?’

COM. The idea is, the present work is merely an outline of these subjects.

NOTES. The word netṛdaśa I take to refer to four varieties of hero (see 2. 2) and six varieties of heroine (three mentioned in 2. 25; two in 2. 32; and the last in 2. 33). — Meter: upajāti.

BOOK THREE

THE NĀṬAKA AS THE TYPICAL VARIETY OF DRAMA

I (P. I; H. I).

prakṛtitvād athānyeṣām bhūyo rasaparigrahāt sampūrṇalakṣaṇatvāc ca pūrvaṃ nāṭakam ucyate.

‘The Nāṭaka is spoken of first, because of its being the type of all [the varieties of drama], furthermore because of its comprising [all] the Sentiments (rasa), and [also] because of the fact that it fulfils the definitions [to be given].’

NOTES. Sections 1-43 of Book 3 are concerned with various aspects of the nāṭaka, or ‘play’ par excellence—the typical variety of Hindu dramatic composition and the one that best exemplifies the rules laid down for such works. The other varieties of drama are then briefly defined (in sections 44-64), chiefly by the enumeration of their points of divergence from the nāṭaka. (Cf., for example, the phrase śeṣaṃ nāṭakavat, 3. 44 d.)

For a brief definition of the nāṭaka see SD. 277; Pratāpar. 3. 32, 33.

pūrvaraṅgaṃ vidhāyādaṃ sūtradhāre vinirgate praviśya tadvad aparāḥ kāvyam āsthāpayen naṭaḥ.

‘When the Stage-manager (sūtradhāra) has gone out after disposing of the Preliminaries (pūrvaraṅga) at the beginning [of the play], another actor, entering in like manner, shall introduce the drama.’

COM. . . . ‘entering in like manner,’ that is, with Viṣṇu-like stride, etc. [cf. Bh. 5. 165 a]. From his function of introducing (sthāpana) and indicating what is to come, he is called Introducer (sthāpaka).

NOTES. The word pūrvaraṅga is the technical name for the ceremonies preliminary to a dramatic performance, which are described in detail at

Bh. 5. 1-175. — No mention is made of the sthāpaka in most of the known plays; he is found in action, however, in the Karpūramañjarī (I. 12³). See the edition of Konow and Lanman, Cambridge, Mass., 1901, p. 196.

|| Bh. 5. 163, 164; SD. 283 a, b; cf. AP. 337. 8. Cf. Lévi, p. 135, 376.

3 (P. 3; H. 3).

divyamartye sa tadrūpo mīśram anyataras tayoh sūcayed vastu bījaṃ vā mukham pātram athāpi vā.

‘[A play] dealing with gods or one dealing with mortals [he shall introduce] in that form [i. e. divine or human, respectively]; [a play whose characters are gods and mortals] commingled, [he shall introduce] as either of these. He shall allude to the Subject-matter (vastu), or the Germ (bīja), or the Opening (mukha), or to one of the characters (pātra).’

COM. Ex.: rāmo mūrdhni nidhā°, stanza from the Udāttarāghava of Māyurāja [a drama apparently not extant] (allusion to the subject-matter); Ratn. I. 6, p. 4 = Spr. 3026 [quoted also at DR. I. 39 and 3. 10] (allusion to the Germ); āsāḍita° [unidentified stanza from a drama, quoted also at DR. 3. 11 and SD. 283; tr. Lévi, p. 139] (allusion to the Opening); Śakuntalā I. 5, p. 14 [quoted in part also at DR. 3. 12] (allusion to a character).

NOTES. || Bh. 5. 169, 170; SD. 283 c, d. Cf. Lévi, p. 379.

4 (P. 4; H. 4).

raṅgam prasādyā madhuraiḥ ślokaḥ kāvyārthasūcakaiḥ ṛtuṃ kaṃ cid upādāya bhāratīm vṛttim āśrayet.

‘After propitiating the audience with pleasing verses that hint at the subject of the composition, he shall use the Eloquent Style (bhāratī) in describing some season.’

COM. Ex.: Ratn. I. 2, p. 1 [quoted also at Kāvya-pradīpa 7, p. 315].

NOTES. The first line of this section refers to the nāṇḍī, a benediction consisting of one or more stanzas, with which a play opens. No special prescriptions regarding the nāṇḍī are given in DR.; see Bh. 5. 106-111; SD. 282; Pratāpar. 3. 34. — This section is quoted at Pratāpar. 3. 35, p. 124.

THE ELOQUENT STYLE

5 (P. 5; H. 5).

bhāratī saṃskṛtaprāyo vāgvyāpāro naṭāśrayaḥ bhedaīḥ prarocanāyuktair vīthīprahasanaṁmukhaiḥ.

‘The Eloquent Style (bhāratī) is a manner of speaking, chiefly in Sanskrit, employed by actors (naṭa) [i. e. not by actresses], which has as varieties, in addition to the Laudation (prarocanā), the Vīthī, the Prahāsana, and the Introduction (āmukha).’

NOTES. AP. has the statement strīyuktā prākṛtoktiṭā, ‘when used by women it is in Prākṛit.’ — On the Styles of Procedure see DR. 2. 77, 83, 88, 94, 95.

6 (P. 6 a; H. 6 a).

unmukhīkaraṇaṁ tatra praśaṃsātaḥ prarocanā.

‘Among these [varieties] the Laudation (prarocanā) is a means of arousing expectancy by means of praise [of the matter in hand].’

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 1. 5, p. 3 [= Priyadarśikā 1. 3, and, with change of one word, Nāgān. 1. 3].

NOTES. || Bh. 20. 27; SD. 286 b; AP. 337. 10; Sarasv. 5. 735 (ed. B. p. 378). Cf. Lévi, p. 137.

7 (P. 6 b, 7 a; H. 6 b, c).

vīthī prahasanaṁ cāpi svaprasaṅge ’bhīdhāsyate

‘The Vīthī and the Prahāsana also, will be mentioned, [each] in its proper connection; the subdivisions of the Vīthī, however (tat punaḥ), are mentioned at this point because they form subdivisions of the Introduction (āmukha).’

NOTES. For the subsidiary parts of the vīthī see 3. 13. — DR. seems to confuse the vīthī and prahasana as varieties of the Eloquent Style with the types of drama known by those names (cf. DR. 3. 62; 55-58). See Sarasv. 5. 737, 742 (ed. B. p. 378, 379), where these varieties are defined.

THE INTRODUCTION AND ITS VARIOUS FORMS

8 (P. 7 b, 8 a, b¹; H. 7, 8 a¹).

sūtradhāro naṭīm brūte mārṣam vā 'tha vidūṣakam svakāryam prastutākṣepi citroktyā yat tad āmukham prastāvanā vā.

'The Introduction (āmukha) or Induction (prastāvanā), is that [variety of the Eloquent Style] in which the Stage-manager (sūtradhāra) addresses an actress (naṭī) or an assistant (mārṣa) or the Jester (vidūṣaka) on a matter of his own, in bright conversation, hinting at the matter in progress.'

NOTES. On mārṣa see DR. 2. 102. In its definition of the Induction SD. substitutes the term paripūrṣvika. — The assignment of a female role to an actress (naṭī) is substantiated by Karpūramañjarī 1. 12³ (see the ed. of Konow and Lanman, Cambridge, Mass., 1901, p. 196).

9 (P. 8 b², 9 a; H. 8 a², b).

'Of this there are [three forms]: the Opening of the Story (kathodghāta), the Entrance of a Character (pravṛttaka), and the Particular Presentation (prayogātīśaya). The subdivisions of the Vīthī are thirteen [in number].'

NOTES. The words vīthyaṅgāni trayodaśa are somewhat out of place here. One would expect them to come directly before the enumeration of the subdivisions (3. 13), as in AP. 339. 7-9. — SD. mentions five forms of Introduction, the udghātyaka (DR. 3. 14) and the avalagita (DR. 3. 15) being included here as well as among the subdivisions of the vīthī (SD. 521). 'The Opening of the Story (kathodghāta) [is that form of the Induction] in which a character enters taking up a remark of the Stage-manager or the meaning [of such a remark], which corresponds with some incident connected with himself. It is of two kinds.'

COM. Ex.: Ratn. 1. 6, p. 4 = Spr. 3026 [quoted also at DR. 1. 39 and 3. 3] (taking up of a remark); Venī. 1. 7, p. 10 [spoken by the stage-manager, but here erroneously assigned to Bhīma; quoted also at Kāvya-pradīpa 7, p. 302] and 1. 8, p. 11 [quoted also at DR. 4. 81] (taking up of the meaning of a remark).

NOTES. Line 1, as above, H, V, P; vākyam vākyaṛtham atha vā prastutaṃ yatra sūtrīṇaḥ Hall p. 39.—The word sūtrin is used for sūtradhāra because of metrical requirements.—The kathodghāta is of two kinds, since either the very words of the sūtradhāra or the purport of his remarks may be taken up by the entering character.

'The Entrance of a Character (pravṛttaka) is the entering of [a person] hinted at by the similarity of [the nature of] the season [described].'

COM. Ex.: āsādita^o [unidentified stanza from a drama, quoted also at DR. 3. 3 and SD. 283; tr. Lévi, p. 139].

gūḍhārthapadaparyāyamālā praśnottarasya vā yatrānyonyaṃ samālāpo dvedhodghātyaṃ tad ucyate.

‘Abrupt Dialogue (udghātya = udghātyaka), which is of two kinds, is a series of successive words whose meaning is hidden, or of questions and answers, where there is mutual conversation.’

Com. Ex.: Vikramorvaśī [a passage not located] (first variety); kā ślāghyā guṇī°, stanza [tr. Lévi, p. 112] from the Pāṇḍavānanda [a drama otherwise unknown] (second variety).

yatraikatra samāveśāt kāryam anyat prasādhyate prastute 'nyatra vā 'nyat syāt tac cāvalagitaṃ dvidhā.

'Continuance (avalagita), which is of two kinds, is that [subdivision of the Vīthī] in which, on the one hand, a different matter is carried out because of a simultaneous occurrence, or, on the other hand, there is a different [turn] in a matter in progress (prastuta).'

vinivṛtṭyā 'sya vākkeli dvis triḥ pratyuktito 'pi vā.

‘Repartee (vākkeli) [arises] from stopping short in it [i. e. in a speech] or from replying two or three times.’

COM. Ex.: Uttaraṛāma. 3. 26, p. 80 (stopping short); Ratn. 1, p. 10 (remark and reply).

NOTES. The name vākkeli, lit. ‘speech-play,’ is appropriate only to the second of the two varieties mentioned; I selected the English rendering ‘Repartee’ with this in mind.

asambaddhakathāprāyo 'satpralāpo yathottaraḥ.

‘Incoherent Chatter (asatpralāpa), [here mentioned] in due order, consists of (prāya) incoherent talk.’

COM. This is not the rhetorical fault called asamgati, which consists in lack of coherence, but the incoherent talk of persons that are just awaking, drunk, insane, or childish. Ex.: Śārng. 105; Vikramorvaśī 4. 33, p. 102 = Spr. 7357; bhuktā hi mayā gir° [unidentified stanza].

NOTES. yathottaraḥ H, V, P; yathottaram Hall p. 39. — After defining asatpralāpa as an irrelevant speech or reply, SD. adds that it may also

USE OF THESE INTRODUCTORY ELEMENTS

27 (P. 21b, 22a; H. 19).

eṣāṃ anyatamenārtham pātram cākṣipyā sūtrabhṛt prastāvanānte nirgacchet tato vastu prapañcayet.

‘The stage-manager, after hinting at the theme and a character with any one of these [elements just enumerated], shall go out at the end of the Induction (prastāvanā) and then begin the detailed presentation (prapañcayet) of the Subject-matter.’

NOTES. The word sūtrabhṛt, like sūtrin in 3. 10, is used for sūtradhāra because of metrical requirements.

|| SD. 295.

SELECTION OF THE PRINCIPAL SUBJECT

28 (P. 22 b-24 a; H. 20, 21).

abhigamyaguṇair yukto dhīrodāttaḥ pratāpavān kīrtikāmo mahotsāhas trayyās trātā mahipatiḥ prakhyātavaṃśo rājarṣir divyo vā yatra nāyakaḥ tatprakhyātaṃ vidhātavyaṃ vṛttam atrādhikārikam.

‘[In a play] in which the Hero is endowed with attractive qualities, [of the type known as] self-controlled and exalted (dhīrodātta), glorious, eager for fame, of great energy, a preserver of the three Vedas (trayī), a ruler of the world, of renowned lineage, a royal seer or a god—in that the incident for which he is renowned is to be made the Principal Subject (ādhikārika).’

COM. A hero with all these qualities, such as is exemplified in the Rāmāyaṇa and Mahābhārata.

NOTES. abhigamya° H, V, P; abhigāmi° and adhigamya° Hall p. 39. — The ‘self-controlled and exalted’ hero is defined at 2. 5; the ādhikārika, at 1. 19. — Cf. Lévi, p. 31.

ADAPTATION OF THE STORY

29 (P. 24 b, 25 a; H. 22).

yat tatrānucitaṃ kiṃ cin nāyakasya rasasya vā viruddhaṃ tat parityājyam anyathā vā prakalpayet.

‘Whatever in it [i. e. in the original story] is at all unsuited to the hero or inconsistent with the Sentiment is to be omitted or arranged in some other way.’

COM. As, for example, the treacherous killing of Vāli was omitted by Māyurāja in the Udāttarāghava; as this same incident was altered [by Bhavabhūti] in the Mahāvīracarita, where Vāli is represented as coming, because of his friendship with Rāvaṇa, in order to kill Rāma [who thereupon slays him in self-defence, not treacherously].

‘After determining upon the beginning and end [of the play] in this manner and after dividing it into five parts, [the author] should furthermore (ca + api) break up into small sections the divisions called Junctures (saṃdhi).’

NOTES. The subject-matter, which contains the five Elements of the Action (I. 27) corresponding to the five Stages (I. 28), is first divided into five Junctures (I. 34–36) and these again into their various subdivisions (I. 37–III).—Cf. Lévi, p. 32.

31 (P. 26 b, 27; H. 24).

‘These subdivisions should be sixty-four [in number].—In like manner, moreover, [one should divide] the incidents of the Episode (patākā), [which should have] one or more Sub-junctures (anusaṃdhi) less [than the principal subject]. In this [i. e. in the Episode] the [number of] subdivisions [may be] as it turns out. One should insert the Episodical Incident (prakarī) without any Juncture.’

COM. . . . The Episodical Incident is to be employed without a complete Juncture.

APPROPRIATE ARRANGEMENT OF THE BEGINNING

32 (P. 28 a; H. 25 a).

ādaṃ viṣkambhakaṃ kuryād aṅkaṃ vā kāryayuktitaḥ.

‘At the beginning [of the play] one should put an Explanatory Scene or an Act, according to the appropriateness of the action.’

‘When, after omitting an extensive part of the subject-matter that is required, but is without Sentiment, one wishes to present the rest, then one should put an Explanatory Scene (viṣkambhaka) [at the beginning].’

NOTES. The viṣkambhaka, one of the five varieties of Intermediate Scene, is defined at I. 116, 117.

‘An Act visibly represents the doings of the Hero, is attended with inherence of the Expansion, and is based on purposes, contrivances, and Sentiments of various kinds.’

NOTES. Further details concerning the arrangement of an Act are given at DR. 3. 41, 42.

THE SENTIMENTS AND THEIR USES

36 (P. 31 b, 32 a; H. 28).

anubhāvavibhāvābhyām sthāyinā vyabhicāribhiḥ

‘The principal Sentiment (aṅgin, sc. rasa) is to be furthered by means of the Consequents (anubhāva), the Determinants (vibhāva), the Permanent State (sthāyin, sc. bhāva), and the Transitory States (vyabhicārin, sc. bhāva), taken up and dropped [in turn].’

NOTES. Definitions of all these terms will be found in sections 1-8, 43, and 54 of Book 4. — Cf. Lévi, p. 86, 257.

na cātirasato vastu dūraṃ vicchinnaṭāṃ nayet

‘One should not make the Subject-matter too disconnected by the excessive [use of] Sentiment, nor should one overwhelm the Sentiment with matters relating to the Subject-matter or its embellishment.’

NOTES. This section is quoted at SD. 316, com. — Cf. Lévi, p. 86.

‘One Sentiment, either the Heroic or the Erotic, is to be made the principal Sentiment; all the other Sentiments [should be made] subordinate. The Marvelous Sentiment should be employed [only] in the Conclusion (nirvaḥaṇa).’

NOTES. On the Erotic, Heroic, and Marvelous Sentiments see 4. 56, 79, 85; on the nirvaḥaṇa, 1. 96.

‘[One should] not [present] the death of the principal character anywhere [in the play], [but] what is inevitable is not to be avoided.’

NOTES. According to this rule, the death of the hero or heroine should neither occur on the stage nor be related in one of the Explanatory Scenes. Judging from Hindu dramatic literature, however, this canon may be violated provided the dead person is restored to life in the course of the play. On such restoration of the dead to life in the Sanskrit drama see Jackson, ‘Certain Dramatic Elements in Sanskrit Plays, first series,’ in Am. Journ. of Philol. 19 (1898), p. 247-250. See p. 150.

a minister, a Brahman, or a merchant, [of the type known as] self-controlled and calm (dhīraprasānta = dhīrasānta), undergoing misfortune, and with virtue, pleasure, and wealth as his chief objects. '[In a Prakaraṇa] the Heroine [may be] of two kinds: the high-born wife of the hero or a courtesan. In some plays [there should be] only the high-born woman; in some plays, the courtesan; in some plays, both. The high-born woman should be indoors, the courtesan without; and the two should never meet. Because of these [varieties of heroine] the Prakaraṇa is of three kinds [i. e. suddha, with the wife as Heroine; vikṛta, with the courtesan; saṃkīrṇa, with both]. The mixed variety (saṃkīrṇa) abounds in rogues.

COM. [The commentary quotes:] Kāmasūtra 3, p. 41. The heroine is a courtesan, for example, in the Taraṅgadatta [a drama apparently not extant]; a high-born woman in the Puṣpadūṣitaka [a drama apparently not extant, mentioned as Puṣpabhūṣita in SD. 512, com.]; of both kinds in the Mṛcchakaṭika.

DESCRIPTION OF THE NĀṬIKĀ

46 (P. 43 a; H. 39 a).

lakṣyate nāṭikā 'py atra saṃkīrṇānyanivṛttaye.

'At this point the Nāṭikā, also, is defined for the purpose of disposing of the other [kinds of drama] that are commingled [in it].'

COM. By a false interpretation of Bh. 18. 54, a kind of drama called prakaraṇikā has been predicated as a lesser form of the prakaraṇa, on the analogy of the nāṭikā as a lesser form of the nāṭaka. The prakaraṇikā, however, is identical with the prakaraṇa and has no separate existence. [But see SD. 554, where it is defined as a separate form. Cf. Lévi, p. 146-147.]

NOTES. Strictly speaking, description of the nāṭikā does not come within the scope of this work, which is limited by its title to the ten principal forms of drama (see also I. 11). The nāṭikā deserves notice, however, because of its frequent occurrence; our author therefore introduces some account of it on the ground that it combines certain features of the nāṭaka and the prakaraṇa.

‘The Bhāṇa (Monologue) [is a kind of drama] in which a single clever and shrewd parasite describes roguish exploits engaged in by himself or by some one else. He is to make remarks conveying information, as well as replies [to imaginary remarks], by means of Conversations with Imaginary Persons (ākāśabhāṣita); and he should indicate the Heroic and Erotic Sentiments by means of descriptions of prowess and of beauty. Generally the Eloquent Style [is employed]; the subject, which is invented [by the author], is treated in a single Act. [The Bhāṇa has two Junctures], the Opening (mukha) and the Conclusion (nirvahaṇa), with their subdivisions, and also the ten subdivisions of the Gentle Dance (lāśya).’

NOTES. The term ākāśabhāṣita, ‘Conversation with Imaginary Persons,’ is defined at 1. 128; the Eloquent Style (bhāratī) at 3. 5.—One would rather expect svānubhūta to have the meaning ‘experienced by himself’; in my translation I follow Dhanika, who glosses the word by svakṛta.

DESCRIPTION OF THE DĪMA

‘In the Dīma the subject must be well-known; all the Styles [may be employed in it] except the Gay Style; its Heroes, sixteen [in number], [should be] gods, Gandharvas, Yakṣas, Rakśasas, Mahoragas, Bhūtas, Pretas, Piśācas, and the like, all [of the type known as] vehement. It contains the six excited Sentiments, omitting the Comic and the Erotic, the customary principal Sentiment being the Furious, [called forth] by deeds of magic, sorcery, combat, wrath, excitement, and the like, and by eclipses of the sun and moon. The Ḍima is declared to have four acts and four Junctures, there being no Pause [Juncture].'

COM. This kind of play is called ḍima because it involves the procedure of injuring on the part of the hero — ḍima being equivalent to saṃghāta, 'injuring.' . . . In other respects [than those mentioned] it is like the nāṭaka. The sage Bharata himself refers to the Burning of Tripura as a suitable subject for a ḍima, in the words idam tripura° [unidentified line] and tatas tripura° [= Bh. 4. 10 b].

'The Vyāyoga (Military Spectacle) has a well-known subject, and has [as principal characters] men that are well-known and [of the type known as] vehement; it lacks the Development and the Pause [as Junctures]; the Sentiments [in it] are the excited ones, as in the Ḍima. [It should represent] a combat not occasioned by a woman, as in the case of the Victory of Paraśurāma [Jāmadagnya]. The Vyāyoga consists of one act, [presenting] the doings of a single day, and contains many male characters.'

COM. This kind of drama is called vyāyoga because many men disagree with one another (vyāyujyante) in it. . . .

DESCRIPTION OF THE SAMAVAKĀRA

61 (P. 62b-68a; H. 56-61).

dharmārthakāmaiḥ śṛṅgāro nātra bindupraveśakau vithyaṅgāni yathālābhaṃ kuryāt prahasane yathā.

'In the Samavakāra there is to be an Introduction, as in the Nāṭaka and the other [varieties of drama]. The subject [is to be] well-known and connected with gods or demons; [it should have all] the Junctures except the Pause, and [all] the Styles, with but little of the Gay Style. Its Heroes [are to be] gods and demons, twelve [in number], [of the type known as] exalted, and far-famed, each [striving for and attaining] a separate object. [It contains] all the Sentiments, with much of the Heroic, as in [the story of] the Churning of the Ocean. In its three Acts [it presents] the three kinds of deception, the three kinds of love, and the three kinds of excitement. The first Act, with two Junctures, should have [a duration of] twelve nālikās; the last two [should have a duration] of four and two nālikās [respectively], a nālikā consisting of two ghaṭikās. The three kinds of deception should be those caused by the nature of the subject, by supernatural action, and by enemies; the [three] kinds of excitement [should be those resulting] from the besieging of a city, from a battle, and from violent winds, fires, and the like; the [three kinds of] love [should be] that according to virtue, that actuated by love of gain, and that actuated by passion. [The Samavakāra has] no Expansion and no Introductory Scene. One may employ the subdivisions of the Vīthī [in it] according to one's requirements, as in the Prahāsana.'

Com. This kind of drama is called samavakāra because various themes are scattered about (samavakīryante) in it. . . . Its heroes are twelve in number—gods, demons, and the like. The ends attained by these are to be separate and distinct, as, for example, the obtaining of Lakṣmī and the like by Vāsudeva and the others in the Churning of the Ocean (Samudramanthana) [cf. SD. 516, com.] . . .

NOTES. °nālikah, °nālikāv, nālikā H, V, P; °nāḍikah, °nāḍikāv, nāḍikā Hall p. 39.—Lévi (p. 143) assigns to the third act a duration of one nālikā; this is apparently an error, unless the information was drawn from another source. The SD. text gives the second act a duration of three nālikās, a variation evidently to be attributed to a corruption of the text from catasṛbhīr to ca tisṛbhīr, as explained by Mitra, SD. tr. p. 249, note 1.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VĪTHĪ

'The Vīthī [is written] in the Gay Style and resembles the Bhāṇa in its Junctures, subdivisions, and Acts. The Erotic Sentiment is to be indicated, but one should touch on another Sentiment as well. [The Vīthī] contains [the parts] named Induction and so forth, and the subdivisions, beginning with the Abrupt Dialogue (udghātyaka). In this way the Vīthī is to be arranged, with the employment of one character or of two.'

Com. [This kind of drama receives its name because it is] like a vīthī—this word meaning either 'road' or 'series of subdivisions.' . . .

NOTES. The Induction is defined at 3. 8. The word āṅga in the compound saṁdhyāṅgāṅkaiś refers to the subdivisions of the Junctures (see DR. 1. 37-111); the word āṅga in the third line of the text refers to the subdivisions of the Vīthī defined at 3. 13-26.

DESCRIPTION OF THE UTSRṢṬIKĀṆKA

63 (P. 70 b-72 a; H. 64, 65).

utsrṣṭikāṅke prakhyātaṃ vṛttam buddhyā prapañcayet rasas tu karuṇaḥ sthāyī netāraḥ prākṛtā narāḥ bhānavat saṃdhivṛtṭyaṅgair yuktaḥ strīparidevitaīḥ vācā yuddhaṃ vidhātavyaṃ tathā jayaparājayau.

‘In the Utsrṣṭikāṅka one should develop a well-known subject by means of the imagination. The Pathetic should be the permanent Sentiment, and the Heroes should be ordinary men. Its Junctures, Styles, and subdivisions are like those of the Bhāṇa, and it contains lamentations of women. A battle is to be presented by means of a [descriptive] speech, and likewise [ultimate] victory or defeat.’

COM. This is called utsrṣṭikāṅka [instead of merely āṅka] for the purpose of distinguishing it from the āṅka (act) included in a play (nāṭaka) [cf. SD. 519, com.].

NOTES. This kind of drama is occasionally referred to merely as āṅka; see, for example, Bh. 19. 45 b.—Hall’s text of Bh. gives the name as utkrṣṭikāṅka; in view of SD. 519, com., and of the inaccuracy of Hall’s text in other respects [see my notes on DR. 1. 80] this may safely be regarded as an error.

|| Bh. 18. 86 b-89 a; 19. 45 b, 46 a; SD. 519; Pratāpar. 3. 4 (p. 103-104), 51. Cf. Lévi, p. 144.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ĪHĀMRGA

64 (P. 72 b-75; H. 66-68).

miśram ihāmṛge vṛttam caturaṅkaṃ trisaṃdhimat naradivyaṃ aniyamān nāyakapratināyakau khyātau dhīroddhatāv antyo viparyāsād ayuktakṛt divyastriyam anicchantīm apahārādinecchataḥ saṃrambham param āniya yuddhaṃ vyājān nivārayet vadhaprāptasya kurvīta vadhāṃ naiva mahātmanah.

'In the Ihāmṛga the story is mixed [i. e. partly legendary and partly invented]; it is divided into four Acts with three Junctures. The Hero and the Opponent of the Hero may be either human or divine, without restriction; both [should be] renowned and [of the type known as] self-controlled and vehement, the latter committing improper acts by mistake. One should also present, though only to a slight extent, the semblance of love on the part of one who tries to obtain a divine woman against her will by carrying her off or some such means. Though hostile wrath is provoked, the battle should be prevented by an artifice. One should not present the death of a great person, [even though he is] killed [in the legend from which the plot is derived].'

COM. This kind of drama is called ihāmṛga because in it the hero pursues (ihate) a woman as unobtainable as a gazelle (mṛga). . . .

NOTES. For the regulation concerning the death of a character see DR. 3. 40 and the notes on that section.

CONCLUSION OF THE THIRD BOOK

'After observing in this manner the series of definitions of the ten forms of drama (daśarūpaka), considering one's subject-matter, and examining the works of the poets, one may produce without effort a literary work that has rhetorical embellishment, eloquent and pleasing words, and clear and slow meters.'

BOOK FOUR

SENTIMENT AND ITS PRODUCTION

1 (P. 1; H. 1).

vibhāvair anubhāvaiś ca sāttvikair vyabhicāribhiḥ ānīyamānaḥ svādyatvaṃ sthāyī bhāvo rasaḥ smrtaḥ.

‘Sentiment (rasa) results when a Permanent State produces a pleasurable sensation through [the operation of] the Determinants, the Consequents, the Involuntary States, and the Transitory States.’

COM. Hence the spectator may be called rasika, ‘perceiver of Sentiment’ [as in 4. 47, 48], and the piece may be called rasavant, ‘possessing Sentiment.’

NOTES. svādyatvaṃ H, V, P; svādutvaṃ Hall p. 39.—This is merely an introductory section mentioning the various technical terms to be defined in the course of the book. The rasa receives further elucidation at 4. 54, and definitions of it in other treatises are referred to in the notes on that section.—This section is quoted at Pratāpar. 4. 1, p. 219.

The individual Sentiments are defined at DR. 4. 56–87; the Permanent States at 4. 43–46; the Determinants at 4. 2; the Consequents at 4. 3; the Involuntary States at 4. 6–7; the Transitory States at 4. 8–42.

A brief summary of the rasa-theory is given by Zachariae, ZDMG. 56 (1902), p. 394–396; see also Grierson, The Satsaiya of Bihārī, Calcutta, 1896, p. 43–48, where the material is conveniently tabulated. For an attempt to apply the Hindu system in the analysis of an Occidental drama (Racine’s Phèdre) see Regnaud, p. 361–364.

DETERMINANTS AND CONSEQUENTS DEFINED

2 (P. 2; H. 2).

jñāyamānatayā tatra vibhāvo bhāvapoṣakṛt

‘Among these a Determinant (vibhāva) is that which causes the development of the States by its being recognized.

Determinants are of two kinds, being divided into Fundamental Determinants (ālambana, sc. vibhāva) and Excitant Determinants (uddīpana, sc. vibhāva).'

COM. The Fundamental Determinants are the hero and the other characters of the drama; the Excitant Determinants are the circumstances of time and place [cf. SD. 161]. . . . śabdopahita°, [unidentified śloka] by Bhartṛhari; Bh. 7, prose after v. 6. Ex.: Vikramorvaśī 1. 10, p. 18 = Śārng. 3268 [quoted also at Kāvya-pradīpa 10, p. 383] (Fundamental Determinant); ayam udayati candr° [unidentified stanza] (Excitant Determinant).

4 (P. 3 b; H. 3 b).

hetukāryātmanoḥ siddhis tayoh saṃvyavahārataḥ.

'A complete understanding of both of these [i. e. Determinants and Consequents], which have the nature of cause and effect, [can be gained] from dealing with them.'

COM. Hence the various Determinants and Consequents need not be separately defined here, as is explained also at Bh. 7, prose after v. 5 [quoted with some variations].

A STATE DEFINED

5 (P. 4a; H. 4a).

sukhaduḥkhādikair bhāvair bhāvas tadbhāvabhāvanam.

'A State (bhāva), [which is brought about] by emotional states such as pleasure and pain, is the realization of such states.'

'The eight [Involuntary States are]: Paralysis (stambha), Fainting (pralaya), Horripilation (romāñca), Sweating (sveda), Change of Color (vaivarṇya), Trembling (vepathu), Weeping (āśru), and Change of Voice (vaisvaryā). Of these, Paralysis is immobility of the body, and Fainting is loss of consciousness. The characteristics of the rest are sufficiently clear.'

COM. Ex.: vevai seada°, muhañ sām° [two Apabhraṃśa stanzas; cf. Pischel, Hemacandra's Grammatik der Prākṛitsprachen, I. viii, Halle, 1877].

NOTES. The words stambhādya vyabhicāriṇaḥ in AP. 338. 13 a show confusion in terminology. The text is probably corrupt, for the Involuntary States are properly named and enumerated in 338. 16-21.

8 (P. 7; H. 6).

viśeṣād ābhimukhyena caranto vyabhicāriṇaḥ
sthāyiny unmagnanirmagnāḥ kallolā iva vāridhau.

‘The Transitory States (vyabhicārin, sc. bhāva) are those that especially accompany the Permanent State in co-operation, emerging from it and [again] being submerged in it, like the waves in the ocean.’

NOTES. The first line constitutes a sort of analytic explanation of the word vyabhicārin, in which an attempt is made to show the force of the three elements vi, abhi, and car by the use of the words viśeṣād, ābhimukhyena, and caranto. This device, which reminds one of the mystical word-analysis frequent in the Upaniṣads (cf., for example, Bṛhad-Āraṇyaka Upaniṣad 5. 7), is characterized more by its ingenuity than by its effectiveness. In the present instance its employment was doubtless suggested by the corresponding passage in Bh., on which see Regnaud, p. 327, note 2. For other cases of etymological explanation see DR. I. 9, 19, 20, 81.

NOTES. °tvarāśvāsa° Hall p. 39; °tvaniḥśvāsa° H, V, P. I have rejected the reading of the previous editions in favor of the variant recorded by Hall, which is clearly preferable. The suffix -tva in ucchvāsātva-niḥśvāsa- is awkward and unusual, even for a verse-filler, and seems to me an indication of some corruption. The reading adopted (ucchvāsa-tvarā-śvāsa-) is found in the quotation of this section in the Kāvya-pradīpa (4, p. 103) and is supported also by the statements of SD., Hem. Kāvyaṇ., and Rasagaṅg., which include tvarā among the effects of autsukya (see the references below). The use of the simple word śvāsa for niḥśvāsa is found also at DR. 4. 27 and can doubtless be paralleled elsewhere.

Com. [In the course of its discussion the com. quotes:] seven stanzas from Dhanika’s Kāvyanirṇaya; Bh. 6. 34.

NOTES. The predominant position of the Permanent State and its importance in a drama or other literary work—indirectly pointed out in the preceding section—is here explained by a comparison with the function of the verb in a sentence (cf. Regnaud, p. 270). The same idea is vividly expressed in the following lines of the Bhāratīyanāṭyaśāstra (7. 8), which are quoted by Keśavamiśra in the Alaṃkāraśekhara (20, p. 76):

*yathā narāṇāṃ nṛpatiḥ śiṣyānāṃ ca yathā guruḥ

‘Charm (svāda) is the arising of delight to one’s self from contact with the theme of a work. It is of four kinds: cheerfulness, exaltation, agitation, and perturbation of mind, in the Erotic (śṛṅgāra), Heroic (vīra), Odious (bībhatsa), and Furious (raudra) Sentiments respectively. [And] these same [kinds of Charm are produced in the case] of the Comic (hāsyā), Marvelous (adbhuta), Terrible (bhayotkarṣa = bhayānaka), and Pathetic (karuṇa) Sentiments. For this reason these [four Sentiments just mentioned] arise from those [mentioned above]; for this very reason [there is possible] a precise determination (avadhāraṇa) [of the number of Sentiments (?)].’

NOTES. vikāśa° Dhanika’s com. on this section; vikāśa° H, V, P. In the meaning in which it is used here the word is clearly a derivative of the root kas. The form given in the commentary is therefore the natural and correct one, and I have accordingly adopted it in place of the erroneous vikāśa.—In this passage vikṣepa is alleged to have the meaning ‘compassion’ (BR. s.v., 9: ‘Mitleid’); but as I know of no other occurrence of the word in this signification, I have not felt justified in adopting that rendering here.—The compound bhayotkarṣa is here used, because of metrical requirements, as a substitute for the regular term bhayānaka. A similar substitution occurs in the following section; see the notes there.

Most of the rhetorical treatises name the eight (or nine) Sentiments, in a special section, before proceeding to define them individually. In DR. this enumeration is dispensed with, probably because the mention of the Sentiments in this section is thought sufficient.—The Sentiments are enumerated in the following passages (note especially Rudr. Kāvyaḷ. and Sarasv., which recognize more than the usual eight or nine): Bh. 6. 15; SD. 209; Rudr. Śṛṅg. 1. 9; Rudr. Kāvyaḷ. 12. 3; Sarasv. 5. 251 a, b (ed. B. 5. 165); Kāvyaaprakāśa 29; Hem. COM. na yatra duḥ^o [metrical definition of śānta-rasa, quoted without indication of source].

NOTES. The compound śama-prakarṣa is here used merely as an equivalent for śānta-rasa, which is the term regularly employed; cf. the use of bhayotkarṣa for bhayānaka in the preceding section (4. 52).—This brief definition is the only mention of the Quietistic Sentiment (śānta-rasa) in the present work. As stated in DR. 4. 44 b, the Permanent State śama, upon which it is based, does not figure prominently in dramatic literature, and our author consequently excludes both śama and śānta from detailed consideration.

DR., on the other hand, recognizes three varieties, ayoga (4. 59), viprayoga (4. 65), and sambhoga (4. 76), the first two of which together correspond to the vipralambha of the other treatises.

Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,

Thence to a lightness, and by this declension

Into the madness wherein now he raves

'Separation (viprayoga) is the sundering of two persons between whom an intimacy has sprung up. It is of two kinds, being divided according to [its arising from] Resentment or Absence. The Resentment [arises] in [a state of] fondness or in [a state of] jealousy.'

NOTES. Most of the other treatises differ from DR. in recognizing four varieties of vipralambha, usually named abhilāṣa (pūrvānūrāga), māna (irṣyā), pravāsa, and karuṇa. The first of these is practically equivalent to our author's ayoga (see DR. 4. 59); māna and pravāsa are mentioned in this section; with reference to karuṇa see the notes on 4. 74. A tabular conspectus of the varieties recognized in the different rhetorical works is given by Schmidt (p. 120; 2d ed., p. 99); it is, however, not absolutely complete and accurate.

See the notes on 4. 58, above. — The references given in the following paragraph are to definitions of the term vipralambha (which corresponds to our author's ayoga and viprayoga) and to statements concerning māna and its two forms.

'The Resentment arising in [a state of] jealousy is anger on the part of women when their lover is heard, inferred, or seen [to be] devoted to another. Of these [three possibilities] hearing [of infidelity means learning of it] from female friends. If it is inferred, it is of three kinds, according as it is deduced from words uttered in a dream, from indications of intercourse [with another], or from the inadvertent mention of [another woman's] name. If it is seen, it is personally witnessed.

NOTES. vyāśrayatvān H, V, P; nirāśrayān Hall p. 39 (as elsewhere in his list of various readings, Hall here disregards the principle of euphonic combination).—On the use of the locative adverb ekaṭra as a member of the absolute phrase mṛte ekaṭra see Whitney, Sanskrit Grammar, § 1099.

The other treatises that mention the contingency of separation by death (see the citations below) recognize a special variety of vipralambha named karuṇa, no mention of which is made in DR. Being a subdivision of śṛṅgāra, this must not be confused with the rasa known as karuṇa (cf. Rudr. Kāvyaḥ. 14. 1, com.: karuṇa-vipralambhas tu śṛṅgāra eva).

Com. Jīmūtvāhana in the Nāgānanda is an instance of a benevolent hero; Rāma in the Mahāvīracarita, of a warlike hero; Paraśurāma, Vali, and others [in dramas based on the Rāma legend] are liberal heroes, as can be seen from Mahāvīra. 2. 35 c, p. 75; khavagranthivimukta^o [unidentified stanza]; stanza by Dhanika = Śāring. 278.

COM. Ex.: jātam me paṛuṣo° [unidentified] stanza spoken by Rāvaṇa (laughter at oneself); Spr. 4588 (laughter at another).

NOTES. Mirth is of two kinds, since it may be provoked by some characteristic of the person amused or of another person; in either case the mirthful individual may be one of the higher, middling, or lower characters in the play (hence the 'threefold origin' mentioned in the text). There are consequently six possible varieties of the Comic Sentiment (as noted also in the commentary), and these are separately described in the following section.

'In this connection a Gentle Smile (smita) is opening the eyes wide; a Smile (hasita) is showing the teeth to some extent; Laughing (vihasita) is making a soft sound; Laughter (upahasita) is the same, accompanied by shaking of the head; Uproarious Laughter (apahasita) is [laughter] accompanied by tears; and Convulsive Laughter (atīhasita = atīhasita) is [laughter] with shaking of the body. Two of these varieties of laughter [are characteristic] of the higher, two of the middling, and two of the lower [characters], in the order named.'

COM. That is, smita and hasita are employed by the higher characters, in amusement at themselves and others respectively; similarly vihasita and upahasita by middling characters, and apahasita and atīhasita by the lower characters.

NOTES. The word mūrchā seems to be used here to represent the word jadatā, and I have so translated it. The word sahacāriṇaḥ, 'concomitants,' furthermore, is merely a substitute for vyabhicāriṇaḥ, 'Transitory States.'

'The Marvelous Sentiment (adbhuta), whose essence is [the Permanent State] Astonishment (vismaya), [is caused] by supernatural things [as Determinants]; it has as its result (karma) [i. e. as Consequents] exclamations of surprise, weeping, trembling, sweating, and stammering; the Transitory States [occurring in connection with it] are generally Joy, Agitation, and Contentment.'

Com. Ex.: Mahāvīra. i. 54, p. 38.

NOTES. °vepathu° H, V, P; °vamathu° Hall p. 39. — With vismayātmā compare śokātmā in 4. 87 and the compounds of -bhū in 4. 79 and 4. 80. The brevity of Dhanamjaya's definitions of the Sentiments necessitates this expeditious method of naming the corresponding Permanent States.

'The Terrible Sentiment (bhayānaka), with Fear, (bhaya) as its [Permanent] State (bhāva), [results] from change of voice, loss of courage, and the like [as Determinants]; it is characterized by trembling of all the limbs, sweating, being parched, and fainting [as Consequents]; its associated [Transitory States] are Depression, Agitation, Distraction, Fright, and the like.'

COM. Ex.: śāstram etat samut° [unidentified stanza]; Ratn. 2. 3, p. 29 [quoted also at DR. 2. 92]; svagehāt panth° [unidentified stanza].

NOTES. °vaicitṭya° H, V, P; °vaiṣvarṇya° Hall p. 39.—The word sambhrama is apparently used for the special term āvega, and the compound sammoha for the simple moha; see 4. 32, 35.

'The Pathetic Sentiment (karuṇa), with [the Permanent State] Sorrow (śoka) as its essence, [results] from loss of something cherished and from attaining of something undesired. In consequence of it [there occur] heaving of sighs, drawing of sighs, weeping, paralysis, lamentation, and the like [as Consequents]; the Transitory States [occurring in connection with it] are Sleeping, Epilepsy, Depression, Sickness, Death, Indolence, Agitation, Despair, Stupor, Insanity, Anxiety, and so forth.'

COM. Ex.: Kumārasambhava 4. 3 (loss of something cherished); the imprisonment of Sāgarikā in the Ratnāvalī (attainment of something undesired).

NOTES. anīṣṭāpteḥ Hall p. 39; anīṣṭāptau H, V, P. I have adopted the variant given by Hall, in order to avoid the harsh contrast of ablative and locative in parallel expressions.—The word svāpa is used as a substitute for nidrā (see 4. 28); in this case there is no metrical reason for the change of term. The word ādhi, which really signifies 'anxiety, mental disturbance,' is here apparently a representative of the term vyādhi, 'Sickness' (see 4. 38). As in the preceding section, the regular term āvega is replaced by the synonymous designation sambhrama.

NOTES. lakṣyasamdhyantarāṅgāni H, V, P; lakṣmasamdhyantarākhyāni Hall p. 39. I adopt Hall's variant reading of the first word, as lakṣya° is probably merely a copyist's error for lakṣma°, due to the similarity of y and m in the Nāgari character. The word lakṣman is here equivalent to lakṣaṇa, which is the usual designation of the subdivisions referred to. — Cf. Lévi, p. 95, 104.

APPENDIX

CLASSIFICATION OF THE SIXTEEN TYPES OF HEROINE

The following diagram shows Dhanaṃjaya's classification of the types of Heroine, the numbers indicating the sixteen varieties. See DR. 2. 24-35.

ADDENDA

3. 40, p. 93. The concluding words of this line would seem to prescribe merely that anything otherwise prohibited, such as the matters mentioned in this and the preceding section, could be represented on the stage if absolutely necessary to the development of the plot. According to the commentary, however, the 'inevitable' consists of religious duties: āvaśyakaṃ tu devapitṛkāryādyaśaśyam eva kvacit kuryāt. Dhanika's interpretation may be authoritative, but I am inclined to think that he is reading a technical meaning into a perfectly simple statement.

4. 24, p. 116. Dr. Charles J. Ogden suggests, in view of the phrase svasthyābhyāsasamutthā . . . smṛtir at Bh. 7. 54, that Dhanamjaya may have written °arthābhyāsinyām. In that case the rendering would be: 'Recollection [is to be understood] in the sense of dwelling on a thing.' —I have no authority for my rendering of bhāsini as 'mental impression,' but this signification seems quite natural, as the root bhās, 'to shine,' has also the figurative meaning 'to imagine, conceive of.'

4. 60, p. 133. Through the kindness of Dr. Franklin Edgerton, of Johns Hopkins University, I am able to add still another passage enumerating the traditional 'ten stages' of unrequited love. It occurs in a MS. of the Vikramacarita, in the Ninth Story, directly after the passage (ending prāṇnoti sma) quoted by Weber, Indische Studien, 15. 338, n. 4. Although evidently originally a gloss, it is imbedded in the text in this MS. The passage reads:

nayanaprītiḥ prathamam cittasaṅgaḥ tato 'tha saṃkalpaḥ nidrāchedas tanutā viṣayanivṛttis trapānāśas tan mūdo 'pi ca mūrchā mṛtir etāḥ smaradaśādaśaiva syuḥ.

(MS. I: 317 of the Wiener Universitäts-Bibliothek; composite MS. in Śārada characters; the Vikr. text occupies fol. 248-373; this passage is on fol. 319 b, or fol. 71 b of the Vikr. selection, whose pages are also numbered separately.)

4. 83, p. 144. As it stands in the printed texts, the first half of the second āryā stanza is defective, lacking one syllabic instant. At SD. 228, where these lines are quoted, Dviveda and Parab attempt to remedy this defect by inserting ca before bhavaty (ed. Bombay, 1902, 3. 219, p. 176). This will not do, however, for according to Piṅgala (4. 14) the sixth foot must be either $\cup - \cup$ or $\cup \cup \cup \cup$, whereas the addition of ca would give $\cup \cup -$. (Cf. Weber, Indische Studien, 8. 291.) At the suggestion of Dr. Louis H. Gray (letter of July 12, 1912) I have adopted the correction atīhasitām. The form atī- exists as a parallel to atī- in atīcāra, atīreka, atīvada, atīśāra. This prefix is probably a loc. sg. of at-*; on the variation between ī and ī in the loc. sg. see Lanman, 'Noun-inflection in the Veda,' JAOS. 10 (1880), p. 426, and Wackernagel, Altindische Grammatik, 2. 1. 132 (Göttingen, 1905).

INDEX OF SANSKRIT TECHNICAL TERMS

The numbers refer to pages. The most important references — those to definitions of dramaturgic terms or to other important mentions of them — are printed in heavy-faced type. The English equivalents adopted in this volume for the native technical terms are distinguished by the use of initial capital letters.

GENERAL INDEX

The numbers refer to pages. The most important references—those to definitions of dramaturgic terms or to other important mentions of them—are printed in heavy-faced type. The English equivalents adopted in this volume for the native technical terms have all been included in this index. They are printed with initial capital letters and are followed by the corresponding Sanskrit words.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY
INDO-IRANIAN SERIES

Edited by A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON

Professor of Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University

Volume 1. A Sanskrit Grammar for Beginners. With Graded Exercises, Notes, and Vocabulary. By A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON. In preparation.

The aim of this work is a practical one; it is designed to furnish a book for the study of the classical Sanskrit in American and English colleges and universities.

Volume 2. Indo-Iranian Phonology, with Special Reference to the Middle and New Indo-Iranian Languages. By LOUIS H. GRAY, Ph.D., sometime Fellow in Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University. New York, 1902.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xvii + 264, $1.50 net.

A brief statement of the phonetic developments undergone by the principal Indo-Iranian languages from the Sanskrit, Avestan, and Old Persian through the Pali, the Prakrits, and Pahlavi down to the Hindi, Singhalese, New Persian, Afghan, and other Indo-Iranian dialects.

Volume 3. A Bibliography of the Sanskrit Drama, with an Introductory Sketch of the Dramatic Literature of India. By MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER, JR., A.M., sometime Fellow in Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University. New York, 1906.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xi + 105, $1.50 net.

The design of this bibliography is to give as complete a list as possible of all printed and manuscript Sanskrit plays and of articles and works relating to the Hindu drama. The introduction furnishes a convenient epitome of the whole subject.

Volume 4. An Index Verborum of the Fragments of the Avesta.

By MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER, JR., A.M. New York, 1901.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xiv + 106, $1.50 net.

This index collects and cites all examples of each word found in the hitherto discovered fragments not included in Geldner's edition of the Avesta.

Volume 5. Sayings of Buddha: the Iti-vuttaka, a Pali work of the Buddhist canon, for the first time translated, with introduction and notes. By JUSTIN HARTLEY MOORE, A.M., Ph.D. (Columbia), Instructor in French in the College of the City of New York. New York, 1908.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xx + 140, $1.50 net.

This volume presents a Buddhistic work not hitherto accessible in translation. The introduction treats of the composition and general character of the work, the authenticity of certain of its sections, and the chief features of its style and language.

Volume 6. The Nyaishes, or Zoroastrian Litanies. Avestan text with the Pahlavi, Sanskrit, Persian, and Gujarati versions, edited together and translated with notes. (Khordah Avesta, Part 1.) By MANECKJI NUSSERVANJI DHALLA, A.M., Ph.D. New York, 1908.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xxii + 235, $1.50 net.

The Pahlavi text, here edited and translated for the first time, is the result of a collation of seventeen manuscripts and forms an addition to the existing fund of Pahlavi literature. The introduction gives an account of the MS. material and discusses the relation of the various versions, their characteristics, and their value.

Volume 7. The Daśarūpa, a treatise on Hindu dramaturgy by Dhananjaya, now first translated from the Sanskrit, with the text and an introduction and notes. By GEORGE C. O. HAAS, A.M., Ph.D., sometime Fellow in Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University. New York, 1912.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xlv + 169, $1.50 net.

This work, composed at the court of King Munja of Mālava toward the end of the tenth century, is one of the most important treatises on the canons of dramatic composition in India. The translation here presented is accompanied by the text and prefaced by an introduction dealing chiefly with the scope and characteristics of the work and its commentary. The notes include, as a special feature, references to parallel passages in all available dramaturgic and rhetorical treatises.

Volume 8. Vāsavadattā, a Sanskrit Romance by Subandhu.
Translated, with an introduction and notes, by LOUIS H. GRAY, Ph.D. New York, 1912.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xiii + 214, $1.50 net.

This romance is one of the best examples of the artificial and ornate style in Sanskrit prose. Besides the translation, the volume will also contain the transliterated text of the South Indian recension, which differs to a noteworthy degree from that of Hall, and a bibliography. The relation of the Sanskrit romance to the Occidental, especially the Greek, will be discussed in the introduction, and the notes will include parallels of incident in modern Indian and other folk-tales, as well as points of resemblance with other Sanskrit romances.

VOLUMES IN PREPARATION

In addition to the Sanskrit Grammar for Beginners, the following volumes are also in preparation :

The Sanskrit Poems of Mayūra, edited with a translation and notes and an introduction, together with Bāṇa's Caṇḍisataka and Mānatuṅga's Bhaktāmarastotra, by G. PAYN QUACKENBOS, A.M., Tutor in Latin, College of the City of New York.

This volume presents the works of a Sanskrit poet of the seventh century. Besides the Sūryaśataka it includes also the Mayūrāśataka, printed for the first time from the unique birch-bark MS. in the Tübingen University Library. The introduction gives an account of Mayūra's life and works, and the appendixes will contain the text and translation of the supposedly rival poems by Bāṇa and Mānatuṅga.

Priyadarśikā, a Hindu Drama ascribed to King Harsha. Translated from the Sanskrit and Prakrit by G. K. NARIMAN and A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON, with notes and an introduction by the latter.

This romantic drama on the adventures of a lost princess was supposedly written by Harsha, king of Northern India in the seventh century, and is now to be published for the first time in English translation. Besides giving an account of the life and times of the author, the introduction will deal also with the literary, linguistic, and archaeological aspects of the play.

Yashts, or Hymns of Praise, from the Khordah Avesta. Avestan text with the Pahlavi, Sanskrit, Persian, and Gujarati versions, edited together and translated, with notes, by MANECKJI NUS-SERVANJI DHALLA, A.M., Ph.D.

This volume is a continuation of the edition of the Khordah Avesta begun with the Nyaishes in volume 6 of the series and will be uniform with that volume in plan and arrangement.

The following volume, not in the Indo-Iranian Series, is also published by the Columbia University Press:

Zoroaster, the Prophet of Ancient Iran. By A. V. WILLIAMS JACKSON. New York, 1899.

Cloth, 8vo, pp. xxiii + 314, $3.00.

This work aims to collect in one volume all that is known about the great Iranian prophet. The story of the life and ministry of Zoroaster is told in twelve chapters, and these are followed by appendixes on explanations of Zoroaster's name, the date of the Prophet, Zoroastrian chronology, Zoroaster's native place and the scene of his ministry, and classical and other passages mentioning his name. A map and three illustrations accompany the volume.
